Big plans for Everett Parks

By MICHAEL WHITNEY

Everett has plenty of park projects happening, with one whole new park being constructed this year.

There are 13 projects at 10 parks across Everett, city parks director Bob Leonard said in February.

The Silver Lake Loop Trail will complete the two-mile loop around Silver Lake, with a connection to the Interurban Trail. It's currently in the planning phase, Leonard said Feb. 17. The city is balancing Ibberson Drive neighbors' concerns about the pathway, Leonard said.

Emma Yule Park, 4730 Colby Ave., should be complete by the end of the year. It will be a neighborhood park featuring "open space, walking paths, benches, game tables" and a playground, a city outline describes, plus a rain garden and central meeting area. Construction will begin this spring.

At Howarth Park, 1127 Olympic Boulevard, the upper portion of the park has a conceptual design developed. Three projects at Howarth Park are to improve the sport court, to replace the playground and to consider replacing the restroom.

At Edgewater Park, 3731 Mukilteo Boulevard, the city is conducting a new master plan for the 1.5 acre park that includes relocating the sport court and replacing the playground. The whole park will be demolished, but a new multi-use sport court will be built on the eastern portion of the park. These renovations will be completed by 2023, Leonard said.

Thornton A. Sullivan Park, 11405 W. Silver Lake Road, will see a new playground "that is inclusive for all kids at all abilities," Leonard said. The restroom and guard shelter will be replaced.

The Lowell Off-Leash Dog Park, 4605 S. 3rd Ave., adjacent to a trail leading to the Riverfront Development will begin being worked on during the fall. A Snohomish County grant is helping pay for the dog park.

At Doyle Park, 3420 Grand Ave., the city parks department wants to replace the playground which dates to 1987. Doyle Park is land owned by the Everett School District, but the parks department will work together on it.

At Madison-Morgan Park, at the corner of the two streets, its expansion is in the design concept phase. It will remain a relatively open space to "demonstrate what a natural, Pacific Northwest area would look like," Leonard said, and have walking areas and meeting space.

The city got grant money to buy a house next door to expand the park size. The house on the property will be retained, and the city might rent it out to earn money, Leonard said.

Rotary Park, 3505 Lowell-Snohomish River Road, will get needed renovations to the boat dock as well as repairing the parking lot and lighting system. Work could start this fall, with much of the work complete in 2022.

A new path at Garfield Park, 2300 Walnut St. in the Riverside Neighborhood, will be finished shortly.

Last but not least, a formal trail network will be developed at the natural, wooded Loganberry Lane Park, sited between Kasch Park and Walter E. Hall Park, too.

United and Alaska fly from Paine Field

Snohomish County's Paine Field Airport (PAE) was built in 1936 and has had a critical role both regionally and nationally as the manufacturing center for Boeing's widebody aircraft, including the 787, 777, 767, and 747. It is the site of the Future of Flight Aviation Center and Boeing Tour, as well as other significant aerospace attractions. Paine Field also is home to a large and vibrant general aviation community. Commercial flights by Alaska and United Airlines at Paine Field Airport began in March 2019. The number of scheduled commercial flights from Paine Field is 24 departures and arrivals each day.

Alaska and United Airlines

currently offer flights to 11 destinations: Denver, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Orange County, Palm Springs, Boise, Phoenix, Portland, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose and Spokane.

The terminal building is approximately 30,000 square feet with two gates. The state-of-the-art terminal is intended to feel more like a lounge. The building has a number of amenities that are not typically seen at commercial terminals, including high-speed internet and power at every seat.

The terminal offers valet parking, paid parking, ride share services and other convenient ways for people to get to and from Paine Field Airport. See www.flypaine.com for details.

Paine Field has an annual impact of more than $20 billion on our economy, primarily due to the aerospace companies that are based at or near there. Commercial air service gives our region an additional transportation asset, providing significant benefits to the travelling public and making our region more attractive for investors and companies looking to relocate.

Snohomish County owns Paine Field, Propeller Airports operates the terminal.

The new Paine Field Passenger Terminal is located at 3300 100th St. SW.

Naval Station Everett

Naval Station Everett (NSE) is one of four major U. S. Navy Installations in the Navy Region Northwest. Everett has one of only two Navy-owned deep water ports on the West Coast of the continental United States. NSE is currently homeport to five destroyers, USS Momsen, USS Gridley, USS Sampson, USS Kidd, and USS Ralph Johnson; as well as operational commands Carrier Strike Group 11 and Destroyer Squadron 9. In addition, the base supports a U.S. Coast Guard buoy-tender and a coastal patrol boat.

Military Sealift Command supply vessels have also used the Navy port. As a Navy shore installation, NSE serves the Fleet, fighters, and their families by providing a secure home base while they support national defense.

For more than 25 years, Naval Station Everett has successfully carried out its mission of the highest standards: To provide superior shore station support to U.S. Navy and Coast Guard forces, while ensuring readiness and quality of life for sailors, civilians, and their families.

The naval station provides facilities and services that support ships at the pier, security forces, emergency response, military training, environmental stewardship, and quality of life programs for single sailors and families residing in surrounding communities.

USS Momsen

USS Samson

Overall, NSE contributes approximately $340 million annually in local economic impact through payroll, goods, services, and contracts.

The base provides nearly 4,000 jobs that include direct employment of federal civilian, active duty military, reserve military personnel, and other related spending.

Meet the Port of Everett

The Port of Everett is a natural deep-water port located on Port Gardner Bay at the mouth of the Snohomish River. The Port was originally formed by the citizens of Everett in 1918 to create economic opportunities and protect the waterfront for the community. The Port has a more than century long history of providing maritime services and appropriate public access to the waterfront. The Port strives to bring quality jobs, business, and tourism opportunities to its local and surrounding communities, and is committed to enhancing, restoring and preserving the environmental health of our waterfront.

The Port District represents nearly 100,000 residents encompassing most of the City of Everett and portions of Mukilteo, Marysville and unincorporated Snohomish County. The Port is governed by three elected Commissioners David Simpson, Glen Bachman and Tom Stiger, and is managed by CEO Lisa Lefeber. The Port operates three lines of business: 1) international shipping terminals; 2) marina facilities; and 3) real estate development.

The Port of Everett Seaport operates eight shipping berths on approximately 125 acres of land, and supports $21 BILLION worth of U.S. exports annually, ranking #2 export customs district in Washington state – #5 on the U.S West Coast. Everett is the third largest container port in the state and the region's premiere breakbulk cargo facility, handling high-value, conventional and oversized cargoes in support of the aerospace, construction, manufacturing, agriculture, energy and forest products industries. Most notably, the Port of Everett serves as an extension of the aerospace manufacturing process, accommodating all oversized aerospace parts for the 747, 767, 777, 777X and K-C Tanker.

The Port also runs the largest public marina on the West Coast with 2,300 slips, 10 guest docks, a state-of-the-art boatyard, the largest public boat launch in the state and a variety of marine-related services. On the real estate side, the Port owns 3,300 acres of property – half of which is dedicated to public access, including Jetty Island. The Port works to return environmentally impaired properties to job producing use, restoring economic prosperity to the waterfront. Port properties provide numerous public access and recreational opportunities supporting a vibrant, livable and balanced waterfront. Since the early 2000s, the Port has invested more than $26 million to expand public access.

Through its operations and unwavering commitment to a balanced waterfront, the Port supports nearly 40,000 jobs and contributes $433 million to state and local taxes.

Economic Recovery & Diversification

As a key economic driver in our region, the Port continues to make major economic strides at the working waterfront. Over the past decade, the Port has invested more than $125 million to modernize its seaport, including the recent completion of the $57 million South Terminal modernization to support the next generation of larger vessels and heavier cargoes now calling Everett. This terminal is critical to our region as it serves a vital link in the quick and efficient handling of cargo to support the aerospace logistics needs for the new 777X and other wide-body aircraft that depend on the Port's custom facilities. It also creates a unique opportunity to position Everett's maritime facilities for cargo diversification to aid in the regional economic recovery needs in front of us.

In 2021, the Port remains laser focused on projects that spur recovery and jobs. The Port looks forward to breaking ground on its new Norton Terminal, transforming the now cleaned up former Kimberly-Clark mill site into a new maritime hub to enhance the movement of commerce, restore jobs and position our region for economic recovery and cargo diversification, while also achieving environmental stewardship.

At the destination waterfront, the Port continues forward with the VISION of creating a waterfront community where people can live, work and play at Waterfront Place. This year, the Port will make history with the grand opening of the first-ever housing at the waterfront and anticipates breaking ground on two new retail buildings at Fisherman's Harbor to welcome new restaurants and retail.

The Port also looks forward to completing its Bay Wood shoreline cleanup to facilitate a new job center and public access to the site, as well as breaching the dike to complete the Port's new Blue Heron Slough wetland mitigation bank creating 353 acres of new salmon habitat.

• Jetty Island Days

Everett's sandy island of wonder is only accessible by a free ferry (unless you have a boat/raft/scuba tank). The island boasts over a mile of sandy beach and the water is shallow and warm (by PNW standards). Jetty Island Days run between July and Labor Day. Fun fact: Jetty Island is a top destination for Kite Boarding.

• Sail in Cinema

Catch free outdoor movies on select Friday evenings during the summer at Boxcar Park. Bring a blanket, junk food and enjoy the show.

• Food Truck Fridays

Feast on street food, lounge in the sunshine, and take in the views of the Olympic mountains. Every Friday from May-September, you'll find a host of food trucks at the Port of Everett's South Marina.

Kiteboarding at Jetty Island

• Grand Avenue Park Bridge

This new pedestrian bridge connects the north end of Grand Avenue Park to the Port of Everett waterfront.
