

The Groene Voltage was a squatted social centre in Rotterdam, the Netherlands from 2006 to 2007.

In its brief lifetime it acted as a temporary autonomous zone, hosting many events.

The Voltage was a bar, a free shop, a cafe, a film night, a hacklab, a meeting place and above all else a social hub for the radical left.

This pamphlet is an account by one member of the collective looking at what the social centre accomplished and what it could have done better.
