5. Health Warning

(A) Weil's Disease is a bacterial infection carried in rat's urine that contaminates water and wet riverbanks. The bacteria do not survive for long in dry conditions. It can be a serious illness requiring hospital treatment, and can lead to kidney or liver failure. Weil's Disease is a notifiable illness. The bacteria are absorbed through the skin or mucous membranes of the mouth and eyes. It gets into the blood stream very easily if you have a minor cut on your skin or feet, should you become immersed. If you feel ill after training or have any of the following symptoms, call your doctor promptly. The most common early symptoms are high temperature, an influenza-type illness and muscle pains. Tell your doctor that you have been undertaking water activities at Frensham and ask if you can have a blood test for Weil's disease.

(B) Certain species of the blue-green algae can produce toxins, which, upon contact, may cause a number of conditions such as dermatitis, asthma, eye irritation, rashes, blistering of the skin around the mouth and nose, nausea, gastroenteritis, muscle cramps, headaches and pneumonia in some people.
