Chairman's Foreword

Lord Colin Moynihan, a former Sports Minister, has been Chairman of the British Olympic Association since 2005. He won a rowing silver medal at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

On behalf of the British Olympic Association it is my pleasure to extend our very best wishes to you in your coverage of the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Within this comprehensive Team GB Media Guide you will find detailed biographical information on the 542 athletes who will represent Great Britain and Northern Ireland with great pride and determination on home soil.

This guide will also provide you with in-depth information on the Olympic sports and disciplines included in the London 2012 Programme. I am delighted that Team GB athletes will compete in all 26 sports in this summer.

In addition you will be presented with a review of the 1908 and 1948 Olympic Games previously hosted in London. It is a source of great pride to the British Olympic Association that London is the first City to be awarded the Games on three occasions.

London 2012 is a fantastic, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for everyone involved with Team GB. As the home team we are fully prepared, determined and ready to deliver the performances that will unite, excite and inspire the nation.

Team GB at the London 2012 Olympic Games will be Our Greatest Team. There is no other sporting competition in recent history in which Great Britain and Northern Ireland has fielded such a large, diverse, talented and ambitious team to represent our great nation with pride and excellence. With the whole of the UK behind them, Our Greatest Team will be 542 athletes, 60 million strong.

At the last Olympic Games in Beijing in 2008, Team GB produced an incredible, record-breaking performance - finishing fourth in the medals table with 47 medals, including 19 golds. Research shows that London 2012 will be the most competitive Olympic Games in history, with more nations capable of placing athletes on the podium than ever before.

Our ambition for Team GB at London 2012 is to win more medals across more sports than we have done in over a century. Given the outstanding performances in Beijing it certainly will not be easy, but it is our belief that by working closely and effectively with the National Governing Bodies of all 26 Olympic sports, and making certain our athletes have all the support they need, the medal tally will take care of itself.

Our commitment to the 262 women and

Comms Foreword

There is no other sporting competition in recent history which Great Britain and Northern Ireland has fielded such a large, diverse, talented and ambitious team to represent our great nation with pride and excellence.

280 men who have earned selection to Team GB is simple; to be the best prepared, best equipped and best supported British Olympic delegation in history.

Home Olympic Games status brings increased spotlight, support and scrutiny on Team GB, and throws up unique opportunities and challenges for our athletes. The importance of home support and the impact this will have on our athlete's performances cannot be highlighted enough, and we will do everything possible to make the most of this not-so-secret weapon.

Alongside our traditionally strong, medal winning sports, it has been encouraging to see many of the sports that were awarded Host Nation Qualification Places for London 2012 make great strides over the past four years towards their ambition of competing credibly against the top nations in the world this summer. It is our aim to ensure these sports continue to progress, and deliver the type of exciting performances that will inspire the next generation of athletes to take up these sports and, in time, qualify by right for future Olympic Games.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you, members of the media, for your continued interest, coverage and support for Olympic sport across the UK. Your reporting will inform, enlighten and unite the nation, while also inspiring future generations to get involved as participants, coaches or volunteers and contribute to leaving a lasting sporting legacy from London 2012.

For the 542 athletes who have achieved the honour of representing Team GB at London 2012, many years of dedication, sacrifice and relentless preparation will culminate in the biggest, most significant moment of their sporting careers over 17 days of competition. I believe they will go down in history as Our Greatest Team.

Yours in sport,

Andy Hunt, Team GB Chef de Mission

Miriam Wilkens, Team GB Head of Media Operations and Services

On behalf of the Team GB Communications Staff, it is our pleasure to welcome you to the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Our goal is to assist you in your coverage of the athletes, coaches, delegation leaders and other personnel who, collectively, comprise the largest delegation to represent Team GB at the Olympic Games for over a century.

To do so, we have brought together a team of highly experienced sport press officers, news bureau writers and communications professionals who, collectively, have worked more than 35 previous Olympic Games.

Every member of this team understands and appreciates the importance of the work you do, the demands and pressures under which you work at the Olympic Games - and we are here to help.

No doubt, these Games will offer a wonderful new chapter in the remarkable history of British Olympic sport. We thank you for your continued interest in Team GB and look forward to sharing this special journey with you.

With best wishes for a successful Games,

Darryl and Miriam.

The BOA

The British Olympic Association (BOA) is the National Olympic Committee (NOC) for Great Britain and Northern Ireland. It was formed in 1905 in the House of Commons, and at that time consisted of seven National Governing Body members from the following sports: fencing, life-saving, cycling, skating, rowing, athletics, rugby, football and archery. The BOA now includes as its members the thirty-three National Governing Bodies of each Olympic sport, both summer and winter.

Great Britain is one of only five countries which has been represented at the summer Olympic Games since 1896. Great Britain, France and Switzerland are the only countries to have been present at all Olympic Winter Games. Great Britain has also played host to two Olympic Games in London: in 1908 and 1948. In 2005, London was selected as the host city for the 2012 Olympic Games.

The BOA is one of 204 NOCs currently recognised by the International Olympic Committee. The IOC's role is to lead the promotion of Olympism in accordance with the Olympic Charter.

The Charter details the philosophy, aims and traditions of the Olympic Movement. The IOC co-opts and elects its members from among such persons as it considers qualified. Members of the IOC are its representatives in their respective countries and not delegates of their countries within the IOC.

A member of each of the Olympic sports makes up the National Olympic Committee, the BOA's decision and policy-ratifying body. The NOC elects four officers: a President, Chairman and two Vice-Chairmen, each for a four year term. Six sports representatives are also elected to the Board.

Roles of the BOA

The British Olympic Association's (BOA) mission is to transform British lives through the power of the Olympic values and the success of Team GB.

The BOA's principal role is to prepare and lead our nation's finest athletes at the summer, winter and youth Olympic Games. Working with the National Governing Bodies, the BOA selects Team GB from the best sportsmen and women who will go on to compete in the 26 summer and 7 winter Olympic sports at the greatest sporting competition in the world.

The BOA is independent and privately funded. We receive no funding from the lottery or government and have no political interests. The success of our mission is entirely dependent upon the income we receive from our fundraising and events. The BOA is the strong, independent voice for British Olympic Sport and is responsible for promoting the Olympic Movement throughout the UK.

BOA programmes supporting Our Greatest Team at London 2012:

• Preparation Camps

Every member of Team GB will pass through the Team GB Preparation Camp at Loughborough University. They will receive an 'Olympic Experience' induction and collect their Team GB clothing supplied by adidas and Next.

• Performance Services

Our performance services team will support each Team GB athlete in achieving their personal best by optimising preparation and recovery. The performance services will include access to equipment such as spin bikes, cardiovascular, contrast baths, stretching and preparation areas.

• Medical and Sport Science support

Sport science support is increasingly crucial to success at the highest level of international sport. The BOA provides high-tech analysis and sport science expertise, and Team GB athletes will receive world class medical support during London 2012.

• Operations and Logistics

The BOA takes pride in their flawless delivery of logistical and operational support in the Games environment. We take care of every detail which could make the difference for the athletes and work hard to create a 'home from home' for them in the Olympic Village.

• Team GB House

This will be the operational nerve centre of Team GB at Games time. Located adjacent to the Olympic Park at Westfield Stratford City, the BOA will occupy a 2000m² area to provide first class operational support that will enhance Team GB's performance. It will also incorporate areas to engage with key stakeholders including Olympic partners, media and supporters of Team GB.

• First Games Home Games

For 70% of Team GB athletes, London 2012 will be their first Olympic Games. For 100% it will be their first experience of competing at a home Games. First Games Home Games is a programme designed to help prepare British athletes for the unique challenges they will face in 2012. It includes video messages and presentations from past Olympians offering their advice.

• Nearest and Dearest

Nearest and Dearest is a programme supported by P&G to prepare friends and family of Team GB athletes to support their loved ones effectively. The BOA have hosted roadshows across the UK and provide a website full of helpful materials.

• Ambition 2014 and 2016

As well as aiming for the greatest British Olympic performance in over 100 years at London 2012, the BOA is also developing the future of Team GB by inviting around 200 outstanding young athletes and coaches to experience the Games and the Olympic environment. Such an experience will help to realise their potential in Sochi 2014, Rio 2016 and beyond.

IN OUR CAPITAL CITY AT OUR OLYMPIC GAMES WE WILL MAKE OUR MARK

Our elite athletes are training hard in the hope of being selected for Team GB and ParalympicsGB. For many this will be a defining moment in a career characterised by the relentless pursuit of sporting success. Home Games mean home advantage and it's been shown time and again that national support can make all the difference between competing and winning. Team GB Ambassadors

A group of 27 of Britain's most inspirational and accomplished Olympians from previous Games are serving as Team GB 2012 Ambassadors, having been selected by the British Olympic Association.

Between them, the Team GB 2012 Ambassadors can draw upon experience of winning 51 Olympic medals, 27 of which are gold.

The Ambassadors have been an integral part of Team GB prior to London 2012 and will continue to be so during the Games themselves.

They will help British athletes and the wider Team GB to achieve their Olympic ambitions, and in doing so, serve as a source of inspiration and motivation for the 60 million Team GB fans across the UK.

The Ambassadors, who have committed their time voluntarily, are supporting Team GB in a variety of ways including helping with a programme to support the friends and family of athletes in the lead-up to and during the Games.

As well as that they have been motivational speaking and answering questions from groups of athletes and sports and been involved at the London 2012 test events.

They also visited the Team GB Preparation Camp in Loughborough and helped to create that 'special moment' when athletes receive their kit while and their presence has been noticed at Team GB fundraising events.

TEAM GB HISTORY

Great Britain staged the 1908 Olympics at less than two years' notice after original hosts Rome withdrew in 1906 following the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

British Olympic Association chairman Lord Desborough led the organising committee, which was aided by organisers of the Franco-British Exhibition. The Franco-British Exhibition built the 68,000-seater main stadium in Shepherd's Bush – demolished in 1985 and replaced by BBC White City – at no cost to the organising committee.

The stadium hosted athletics, cycling and swimming events while other events were accommodated across Britain, including sailing on the Solent and on the River Clyde in Glasgow.

The Games were the longest in history, beginning on April 27 and spanning 187 days with the Olympic programme including rugby union, polo, motor boating and tug of war.

Figure skating was held for the first time at an Olympic Games – Florence 'Madge' Syers winning gold in the women's competition and also bronze in the pairs with husband Edgar.

The Games finally came to an end with the hockey final on October 31 when England won the last of 56 gold medals – on this occasion Britain were represented by a team from each of the four home nations in hockey. Statistically these were Britain's most successful Games although they benefited from rules which allowed them to field a team with more than a third of the overall number of competitors – 736 athletes contributing to 146 medals.

It was the first, and remains the only time, that Britain have finished top of the medal table at an Olympic Games. Swimmer Henry Taylor picked up an impressive three gold medals – a feat not equaled by a Brit until Sir Chris Hoy's performances in Beijing 100 years later – and George Larnar triumphed in two walking events.

Elsewhere, the home nation dominated sailing and rowing while British boxers took every gold medal available. The football team won the first of successive gold medals and Great Britain won every gold medal in tennis – the events held both indoors and out. These Games saw the only walkover in Olympic history when British runner Lieutenant Wyndham Halswelle won 400m gold by default. The three other participants – all American – failed to take to the start line following a dispute after the race was ordered to be re-run.

American standing jumper Ray Ewry added a further two gold medals to his six from previous Games, and his compatriot Melvin Sheppard claimed a middle-distance double. John Taylor, a 400m sprinter, became the first black athlete to win an Olympic gold medal as part of the American 1600m relay team, and Russia won its first title in the newly-introduced men's figure skating – Nikolai Kolomenkin winning gold. Yet the moment of the Games was undoubtedly the marathon, in which race leader Dorando Pietri of Italy collapsed five times in the final stadium lap.

He crossed the finish line first but was disqualified because officials carried him over after which he was met with a wave of public sympathy and awarded a special Silver Cup by Queen Alexandra. American Johnny Hayes was eventually awarded gold.

After a 12-year absence caused by World War II, the Olympics were held in London for the second time in 1948. London had been awarded the 1944 Games but had to wait with hostilities not ending until 1945. Within days of the end of the war, the IOC Executive Board gathered in London and asked members to choose the 1948 hosts by postal ballot with a strong recommendation to choose the city.

These were a sombre Games, not only because of the aftermath of the war, but also because it was the first Games since the death of the founder of the modern Olympics, Pierre de Coubertin, in 1937. As in 1908, it was the chairman of the BOA, Lord Burghley, at the time also president of the IAAF and an influential member of the IOC, who led the organising committee.

Wembley chairman Sir Arthur Elvin offered the stadium as a centrepiece while the Empire Pool – now known as Wembley Arena – staged the swimming, diving and boxing events and will be the 2012 venue for badminton and rhythmic gymnastics. Male competitors were accommodated at Royal Air Force Camps in nearby Uxbridge and Richmond while the rowers and canoeists were billeted in High Wycombe, nearer to the course at Henley. The female competitors were put up in hotels.

The Games were widely credited with providing the global community with a much-needed lift and a record 59 nations participated. As hosts, Great Britain entered 375 athletes and claimed 23 medals, three of which were gold, to finish 12th overall. The successes came in rowing, where Jack Wilson and Ran Laurie won the men's coxless pairs and Dickie Burnell and Bertie Bushnell triumphed in the men's double sculls, and in sailing, in which David Bond and Stewart Morris won the Swallow class.

Other stars of the Games included the Netherlands' Fanny Blankers-Koen, who won four gold medals on the track – the 100m, 200m, 80m hurdles and 4x100m relay – and remains the only female to win four athletics gold medals at an Olympics. Czechoslovakia's Emil Zatopek won the 10,000m gold medal and was second in the 5000m, and would return to the Games in 1952 to establish himself as one of the top distance runners in Olympic history. Two athletes who became Olympic champions at Berlin 1936 managed to defend their titles 12 years later – Hungarian fencer Ilona Eleky in women's individual foil and canoeist Jan Brzak-Felix of Czechoslovakia in the C2 1000m. Beijing 2008

Great Britain won 47 medals – 19 gold, 13 silver and 15 bronze – across 11 sports at the Beijing 2008 Olympics for a best medal haul in 100 years.

Chris Hoy became the first British athlete to win three Olympic gold medals in the same Games since 1908 after topping the podium in the individual and team sprints and keirin.

And to continue the centurion theme, with two gold medals in the pool, Rebecca Adlington became Britain's most successful Olympic swimmer of the last 100 years.

Louis Smith won Britain's first individual gymnastics medal since 1908 and the first British medal ever in the pommel horse after taking bronze.

Tim Brabants won Team GB's first ever canoeing gold medal while Sarah Stevenson won the nation's first-ever taekwondo medal with +67kg bronze.

Rebecca Romero became the first British women to win medals in two different summer sports, following up her silver in rowing from Athens 2004 with cycling gold in Beijing.

Team GB's boxers achieved their best medal haul since 1956 – however the nation had no representation in either baseball, basketball, football, handball, softball, table tennis, volleyball or wrestling.

The Team GB delegation is the largest for over a century, the biggest since London hosted the Games for the first time in 1908, when 676 athletes represented the host nation.

At London 2012, Team GB will include more female athletes than ever before with 262 women – 48 per cent – and 280 men – 52 per cent – selected to compete for Team GB this summer.

The number of women is significantly more than the previous record of 143 who represented Team GB at the last Olympic Games in Beijing in 2008.

Tom Daley performing a dive

Diving

Introduction

Diving made its Olympic debut in 1904 when the two events contested, by men only, were the 10m platform and the plunge for distance, in which American William Dickey remains the Olympic champion with a distance of 62 feet and six inches.

Four years later, when London first staged the Games, the plunge had been replaced by the 3m springboard event, which according to official Olympic records was also named 'fancy diving'.

Styles of diving include front, back, reverse, inward, twist and armstand, with points awarded according to technique and grace and the more difficult the dive, the higher the points it can score if executed well.

China is the sport's undisputed powerhouse and their squad will arrive in London among the most strongly-fancied gold medal contenders.

In the last three major global championships – the 2008 Olympics and 2009 and 2011 FINA World Championships – they have won all but three gold medals in Olympic events.

Australia's Matthew Mitcham and Great Britain's Tom Daley won 10m platform gold in Beijing and the 2009 FINA World Championships in Rome respectively, while Mexico's Paola Espinosa took the women's 10m platform title in the Italian capital.

However, at last year's World Championships in Shanghai China won gold medals in all eight Olympic disciplines, as well as two silvers. Qualification for Olympic events started in Shanghai and concluded at the FINA Diving World Cup, which was held at the Olympic Aquatics Centre in February.

Team GB 2012

Peter Waterfield will make his fourth Olympic appearance as part of a 12-strong team at London 2012 – as Great Britain field a full complement of entrants and two more than Beijing.

Waterfield's 10m synchro silver with Leon Taylor at Athens 2004 was Britain's first Olympic diving medal for 44 years and Waterfield will be aiming for a return to the podium in the 10m synchro with Tom Daley, while he'll also dive in the 10m individual.

Daley too will dive in the 10m individual and will compete in London as the reigning European champion and World Series title-holder in the 10m synchro with Waterfield.

While Daley was the youngest male on the British diving team at Beijing 2008, and the entire GB squad, at 15 Alicia Blagg will take on the former role in London as she competes in the 3m synchro with Rebecca Gallantree.

Jack Laugher, a double world junior and European junior champion, is the youngest male at 17 and will compete in the 3m individual.

Gallantree will also compete in the 3m individual after Britain were awarded a further host nation place shortly after the team was announced.

Hannah Starling was the first athlete picked

● We have had some excellent results this year with one of our most successful showings at a FINA World Series and European Championships with medals coming in more than one event showing the depth we have within our squad. ●

ARMSTAND:

A platform dive that begins from the hands

DID YOU KNOW?

Britain's Leon Taylor invented the back 2.5 somersaults, 2.5 twists, a dive now used by many of the world's best for the 3m individual while the men's 3m synchro pair will be Nick Robinson-Baker and Chris Mears. Six of the 12 selected athletes competed at Beijing 2008, including Robinson-Baker who won his third successive British title with Mears in June.

Mears will join Laugher in the 3m individual while European champions Tonia Couch and Sarah Barrow will contest the women's 10m synchro.

Couch, making her second Olympic appearance, and Barrow became the first British females for 74 years to win European gold in May.

British champion Stacie Powell and Monique Gladding – the oldest female on the British team at 31 – complete the 12 athletes, both diving in the 10m individual event.

Gladding will compete just 18 months after a horror accident which saw her hit her head on the 10m diving platform in a competition in Russia. She was knocked unconscious and had to be dragged from the bottom of the pool by husband and coach Steve and teammate Robinson-Baker.

Competition format

There are eight gold medals up for grabs and athletes compete individually and in pairs, known as synchronised diving or synchro.

The men's and women's 3m springboard and 10m platform are divided into three phases. In the preliminary round the men have six dives, the women have five, and the top 18 progress to the semi-final.

The best 12 divers in the semi-final then progress to the final, where they dive in reverse order of their semi-final finishing position to decide the medals. A panel of seven judges assess each dive, giving a score out of ten.

The men's and women's synchronised 3m springboard and 10m platform are decided by straight finals with eight teams competing – again six dives for men and five for women. A panel of 11 judges assess each dive, giving a score out of ten.

In advance of competition divers submit the dives they will perform. The more difficult a dive, the higher the potential score. Judges marks are then multiplied by the dive's difficulty tariff, of which there are five levels.

In the synchronised diving events, pairs of athletes dive in tandem and are assessed for their execution and synchronisation by separate groups of judges.

Diving regulations state that the competition diving pool must be 25m long and five metres deep while springboards must be at least 4.8m long and 50cm wide

I remember Beijing so well and that was an amazing experience but I think London will top that for me. It was so loud every time the Chinese divers came out and I know it will be just as loud for us in London.

Tonia Couch

and platforms should be at least six metres long and three metres wide.

Rules set by international governing body FINA mean athletes must be 14 by the end of an Olympic year to be eligible for selection. It was a rule that allowed then 14-year old Daley to make his Olympic debut in Beijing.

TOM DALEY

Event: 10m Individual, 10m Synchronised

Lives: Plymouth
Height: 1.77m (5ft 10ins)

Tom Daley began diving aged seven and in 2004 he became the youngest ever under-18 champion at the national championships.

Daley competed internationally for the first time at the Australian Youth Olympic Festival three years later where he won a 10m synchro silver medal with Callum Johnstone.

Making Daley's performance all the more impressive was that he had to be given special dispensation to compete as he was below the minimum age requirement.

He became Britain's youngest ever European gold medalist in 2008 when he claimed the 10m individual title before making his Olympic debut in Beijing where he became Great Britain's youngest Olympian for 48 years.

Daley earned the title of Britain's youngest ever world champion in any sport when he took 10m individual gold in Rome in 2009.

An injury to his triceps affected his 2010 season but he won double gold at the Commonwealth Games that year and in May he won his second European title.

In 2010 Daley became the first person to win the BBC Young Sports Personality of the Year award on three different occasions.

He also won the British 10m individual and 10m synchro titles this year.

Peter Waterfield is the oldest and most experienced member of the British team for London 2012 – and won Olympic 10m synchro silver with Leon Taylor at Athens 2004.

Waterfield's success with Taylor was Britain's first medal since Rome 1960 and the sixth in the history of the Games.

At London 2012 he will compete in the 10m synchro for the first time at an Olympics since 2004, partnering Tom Daley. The pair are the current World Series champions.

Waterfield also won World Cup bronze in the 10m individual in February and will add that event to his Olympic schedule in London.

He has been unfortunate with injuries this year – minor shoulder and neck problems – with the latter keeping him out of this year's European Championships.

Waterfield did return to win 10m synchro gold with Daley at the British Championships but had to settle for silver in the 10m individual, finishing behind his Olympic synchro partner.

Swimming

Introduction

In total 950 athletes will compete in 34 separate swimming events at the London 2012 Olympics. The Aquatics Centre will host all events in the pool while the Serpentine in Hyde Park will act as the venue for the men's and women's 10km open water races.

Team GB won six medals at the Beijing Olympics in 2008, bettering the two won at Athens 2004 with David Davies finishing on the podium at both Games. Rebecca Adlington won two gold medals in Beijing to become Britain's first Olympic swimming champion since 1988 and the first to win two gold medals at the same Games in 100 years.

With six medals, Great Britain finished third in the overall swimming medal table as the sport's two dominant forces, America

● This GB swimming team is a real mix of tried and tested experienced former Olympians together with an exciting crop of talented youngsters who will sample their first Olympics in London. ●

Team GB Swimming Team Leader Michael Scott

and Australia, were first and second respectively. American Michael Phelps broke Mark Spitz's record of seven gold medals at a single Olympics by winning eight in Beijing. His Olympic medal total of 16 – 14 gold and two bronze – is second

Team GB 2012

Rebecca Adlington will lead the British team having set, what were at the time, world leading times on the way to gold in the 400m and 800m freestyle at the trials at the Olympic Park in March. Adlington will also take to the pool as the reigning 800m world champion, having won the title in Shanghai last year.

Adrian Moorhouse, who won 100m breaststroke gold at the 1988 Games in Seoul, was the last Brit to win an Olympic title before Adlington picked up the first of her two in the 400m in Beijing.

Meanwhile, Anita Lonsbrough was the last British female to win an Olympic title, capturing 200m breaststroke gold at the 1960 Games in Rome. Adlington will be one of two reigning British world champions in Olympic events in London with Keri-Anne Payne bidding to upgrade her 10km open water silver from 2008 to gold in Hyde Park.

Payne has won world gold twice in the years between Beijing and London – her second gold in Shanghai last year ensuring she was the first British athlete to qualify for the Games.

Liam Tancock will also swim as a reigning world champion however his title is in the non-Olympic 50m backstroke while Gemma Spofforth is a former global gold medallist, and current world record holder, in the 100m backstroke. David Davies will be one of seven British

● The Olympics in London will be the biggest thing I will experience. To be going is the best feeling in the world. Of course there were nerves.

So many months preparing, four years, you can't imagine how good it feels. ● swimmers to compete at a third Olympic Games, having won 1500m freestyle bronze at Athens 2004 and 10km open water silver at Beijing 2008. Initially, 38 British swimmers were selected after the first trials in March but that became 37 when Daniel Sliwinski withdrew with injury. Seven more were selected after the second trials in June, including David Carry, who joins fiancée Payne at the Games.

Competition format

Of the 34 swimming events, 32 will take place in the pool and two – the men's and women's 10km open water races – in Hyde Park. In the pool, there are five individual disciplines – freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and individual medley – with distances in the pool ranging from 50m to 1500m and two competitors allowed per nation per event.

Open water swimming will return for its second successive Games while in the pool, heats, semi-finals and finals are conducted in every individual event apart from the 400m, 800m and 1500m freestyle and the 400m medley, which don't require a semi-final.

DID YOU KNOW?

Underwater swimming featured at the Paris 1900 Games. Competitors earned points for the length of time and distance they went underwater

In these events the eight fastest from the heats qualify for the final. In the other pool events, the 16 fastest swimmers from the heats progress through to the semi-finals, where the next eight quickest reach the medal showdown.

Only men compete in the 1500m freestyle while the 800m equivalent is solely for women and there are six relay events – the 4x100m and 4x200m freestyle, as well as the 4x100m medley, for both genders.

TEAM GB HERO: DAVID WILKIE

David Wilkie won silver in the 200m breaststroke at Munich 1972 before upgrading to gold in Montreal four years later. He became the first British male since Henry Taylor in 1908 to claim Olympic gold but wasn't done there. He added 100m breaststroke silver to his medal tally in 1976. Wilkie was the first elite swimmer to wear a cap in a major competition at the 1970 Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh where he won bronze. He is also said to be the first swimmer to wear a head-cap and goggles together in competition.

REBECCA ADLINGTON

Event: 400m freestyle, 800m freestyle, 4x200m freestyle relay
Born: 17.02.1989, Mansfield
Lives: Nottingham
Height: 1.79m (5ft 10ins)
Weight: 70kg (11st)
Club: Nova Centurion
Coach: Bill Furniss
Games attended: One (Beijing 2008)

Major achievements: OG: gold (400m free), gold (800m free) 2008. WCh: 24th (200m free), silver (400m free), gold (800m free) 2011; bronze (400m free), 4th (800m free), bronze (4x200m free) 2009. CG: bronze (200m free), gold (400m free), gold (800m free), bronze (4x200m free) 2010. ECh: gold (400m free), bronze (4x200m free) 2010; silver (800m free) 2006.

Rebecca Adlington became a household name after winning double gold at the Beijing Olympics in 2008 but made her senior British debut at the 2006 European Championships in Hungary, winning 800m freestyle silver.

Adlington treated herself to a pair of Christian Louboutin shoes after her Olympic success in China and wants a Chanel bag if success is forthcoming in London.

She qualified for the 400m and 800m freestyle events for London 2012, setting then world-leading times in both at the trials at the Aquatics Centre in March.

Adlington still holds the 800m freestyle world record, clocking 8:14.10 minutes on the way to Olympic gold in 2008, but will face stiff competition from Denmark's Lotte Friis in that particular event in London.

Italian Federica Pellegrini and France's Camille Muffat will be among her main rivals in the 400m and if her superstition is anything to go by she will be wearing a new race costume at the Games.

SOPHIE ALLEN

Event: 200m individual medley
Born: 21.03.1992, Lincoln
Lives: Cheadle
Height: 1.70m (5ft 7ins)

Major achievements: ECh: silver (200m IM) 2012. EJCh: silver (200m IM) 2008.

Sophie Allen learnt to swim as a way of keeping active as a child and lists cake decorating as her favourite hobby. Torn cartilage in her left hip, which required arthroscopy, seriously affected Allen's 2010 season. She won 200m individual medley silver at the European Junior Championships in 2008 and qualified for London 2012 by finishing second in the same event at the Olympic trials in March. Allen won European 200m medley silver in May.

Robert Bale's aunt swam to international level while his dad was a Scottish university champion and his granddad used to coach. Synchronised swimming

Introduction

Synchronised swimming is one of just two disciplines at the Olympics where only women taken part – rhythmic gymnastics the one other to apply such rules.

Held in the same venue as swimming and diving, the Olympic Aquatics Centre, the minimum area used for synchronised swimming is 30 metres long by 25 metres wide.

It made its debut at Los Angeles 1984, featuring at every Games since, and for the fourth Olympics running the duet and team events will be contested in London.

DID YOU KNOW?

Hollywood star Esther Williams performed water ballet, or aqua-musicals as they were known, in several American movies in the 1940s and 1950s. She hoped to compete in the 1940 Olympics, which were cancelled because of World War II

Eight countries, of which Britain are one courtesy of being the host nation, enter both the duet and team events while a further 16 compete in just the former. Two athletes from each country compete in the duet and eight compete in the team.

Russia are synchronised swimming's powerhouse having won both the duet and team at the past three Olympic Games.

Team GB 2012

Britain will field a full synchronised swimming team for the first time ever at an Olympics in London this summer – with nine athletes chosen.

The British synchronised swimming team for London 2012

Jenna Randall and Olivia Federici will lead the team into the Olympic Aquatics Centre having competed in the duet at the Beijing Olympics in 2008.

They became the first British synchronised swimmers to compete at an Olympics since Natasha Haynes, Kerry Shacklock and Laila Vakili at Barcelona 1992.

Randall and Federici competed in the duet in China and head into London as Commonwealth silver medallists in the event.

Their performances at World Championship level have got progressively better with a tenth from their technical duet routine and an eighth from their free duet at the 2011 event in Shanghai.

The team have also shown marked improvements and placed tenth in the technical, ninth in the free and seventh in the combination at the World Championships last year.

Randall is joined on the British team by younger sister Asha – the pair the second set of siblings to be officially announced onto Team GB, after sailors Kate and Lucy Macgregor, with five in total.

Under performance director Biz Price, appointed to the position in 2007, synchronised swimming has come a long way with a High Performance Centre in Aldershot set up the same year.

Competition format

With the aid of underwater speakers athletes perform short routines to music with panels of judges marking them on a variety of components including choreography, difficulty and execution. In both the duet and team events technical and free routines are performed – however because the number of countries competing in both vary the format changes slightly.

In the duet, the technical and free routines form part of the preliminary phase after which the top 12 pairs with the best combined scores progress to the final and perform another free routine.

Final placings are then decided by adding the score for the technical routine in the preliminary phase with that of the free routine in the final.

In the team event each nation performs a technical and a free routine with the total of the two scores deciding the overall rankings.

Judges can hand out point deductions for a variety of infringements including taking too long on the deck before entering the pool, deliberately using the bottom of the pool and missing out any of the compulsory elements of the technical routine.

Water Polo

Introduction

Water polo has been on the Olympic programme since 1900 and is the longest running team sport on the schedule, while a women's competition was introduced for the first time at Sydney 2000.

Great Britain won four of the first five gold medals on offer – only American teams competed at St Louis 1904 – but have not participated since Melbourne 1956, in which time Hungary have underlined their dominance.

Hungary have claimed nine Olympic gold medals and will bid for a fourth successive men's title at London 2012, having won their first at Los Angeles 1932.

Arguably, their most famous victory came

● The squad has worked hard over the last eight years and it has been a real team effort to get this far. It is exciting and an honour for us to finally be joining Our Greatest Team. Bring it on. ● in 1956, when they defeated the Soviet Union in the semi-finals in Melbourne against the backdrop of the Hungarian Uprising.

As the athletes left for the Games the Hungarian Revolution broke out but was swiftly crushed by the Soviet army. When both teams clashed in the semis, violence was prevalent from the onset and, with Hungary 4-0 up with just a few minutes remaining, Ervin Zador emerged with blood pouring from an eye after being punched by a Soviet opponent.

Pro-Hungary fans surged on to the pool deck in protest, causing the game to be stopped with a minute left on the clock. Hungary were later declared the winners of what is known as the 'Blood in the Water' match.

While the Hungarian men's team have been the dominant force at the Olympics, the women's side are still waiting for their first medal with Australia, Italy and the Netherlands claiming gold in 2000, 2004 and 2008 respectively.

Each nation is allowed to enter one squad of 13 athletes per gender with 12 teams participating in the men's competition and eight in the women's competition. Great Britain will field a men's and women's team in London, courtesy of being the host nation.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will enter a men's water polo team for the first time since 1956 and a women's team for the first time in Olympic history at London 2012.

With limited funding available to water polo being focused on the women's team in 2008, the majority of the men's team have been based in European leagues with much success.

● I'm so pleased to be able to have the opportunity to play in a home Olympic Games. It's mixed emotions for our teammates who haven't made it through as they have all helped us to improve and I hope we do them proud in London. ●

Team GB Men's Water Polo Captain Craig Figs

men finished fourth at the European B Championships in 2009 while more recently they have suffered a narrow 11-9 defeat to Russia in the World League.

The men's team have been drawn against reigning Olympic champions Hungary, the USA and Serbia – the silver and bronze medallists at Beijing 2008 – as well as Montenegro and Romania in the group stage.

The women, captained by Fran Leighton, are considered a better medal prospect, having been the only team to defeat reigning world champions Greece in 2011.

Great Britain qualified for the 2012 European Championships for the first time in 15 years and finished seventh following victory over Germany – their best result since 1987.

The women's team is centralised in Manchester but in the 2010/11 season, they took part in the Hungarian National League to aid their development. They face Italy, Russia and bronze medallists from Beijing 2008 Australia in the London 2012 group stages.

Competition format

Men's water polo is played in a pool 30 metres long and 20 metres wide and women's water polo is played in a pool 25 metres long and 20m wide both with a preferred minimum depth of two metres. Goals, floating and held in place by buoys, are situated at either end of the pitch. The posts are three metres apart and the bar 90 centimetres above the surface of the water.

Despite squad size being 13, no more than seven players, including the goalkeeper, are allowed in the water at any one time. Substitutions are unlimited and players wear numbered bathing caps with special ear protectors. The London 2012 competition begins with a round-robin group stage. In the men's competition there are two groups of six teams while in the women's there are two groups of four.

In the group stages each team receives two points for a win, one for a draw and zero for a loss; the winners of the two groups in each gender competition automatically progress to the semi-finals.

The second and third placed teams in both pools in each gender competition meet in the quarter-finals with the winners progressing to the semi-finals and losers facing each other in a fifth and sixth-place play-off.

The winners of the semi-finals then meet in the gold medal match while the losers contest the bronze medal match.

In the men's competition those teams that finish fourth, fifth and sixth in their groups face a series of classification matches to determine places seven to 12.

In the women's competition the two teams that finish bottom of their pool face off in a seventh and eighth-place play-off.

If scores are level at the end of any of the classification matches, two three-minute overtime periods are played after which if the scores are still tied a penalty shootout takes place.

Matches consist of four periods of eight minutes and each quarter starts with a swim-off – a race to the ball at the centre of the pool.

Much like basketball, a shot clock is in operation where each team has 30 seconds to take a shot at goal before the opposing team takes possession. There are two referees in water polo, who stand on each side of the pool and two goal judges who sit at either end; they are assisted by two timekeepers and two secretaries.

Players are not allowed to touch the sides or bottom of the pool during play. An offside rule applies when an offensive player crosses the two-metre line in front of the goal before the ball does.

There are three types of foul – ordinary, exclusion and penalty. Ordinary fouls include holding onto the goal posts, holding the entire ball underwater, pushing an opponent and time wasting and are punished by awarding the opposing team a free throw.

Ordinary fouls such as hitting the ball with a clenched fist and touching the ball with both hands do not apply to the goalkeeper.

Exclusion fouls include splashing water in an opponent's face as well as holding, kicking or striking an opponent and are punished with a free throw. The offending player is also excluded for 20 seconds, until a goal is scored or until his/her team gain possession. A player who commits three of these fouls is dismissed for the remainder of the match.

Penalty fouls include committing an act of brutality within five metres of the goal and toppling the goal to prevent a score. In the event of a penalty foul, a penalty throw is taken from behind the five-metre line.

Archery

Introduction

The London 2012 archery competition will be held at the world-famous Lord's Cricket Ground and is sure to provide one of the iconic images of the Games.

Archery made its first appearance at Paris 1900 but in 1920 it was dropped due to a lack of uniformity in the rules and equipment before finally returning to become a regular feature from Munich 1972 onwards.

Recurve is the only archery discipline featured at the London 2012 Olympics with 128 competitors, 64 men and 64 women, battling for medals in four events.

Podium positions are on offer in the men's and women's individual competitions and the men's and women's team events with each country limited to selecting three athletes per gender. All three compete together as a team as well as individually.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will fill the quota of three men's and three women's places in London and bid to take the nation's all-time Olympic medal haul into double figures.

Four Brits, Simon Terry and Larry Godfrey along with Naomi Folkard and Amy Oliver, booked their places after finishing as the top two men and women from the three selection shoots that took place at Lilleshall over the course of March and April.

Alan Wills and Athens 2004 bronze medallist Alison Williamson both placed third and were confirmed on Team GB in May. The six selected athletes have a total of 12 Olympic appearances and three medals between them.

Williamson alone has made five appearances with London set to be her sixth straight Games as she joins fellow Brits Tessa Sanderson, javelin, Bill Hoskyns, fencing, and Mike Dixon, biathlon, on such a number. Equestrian athletes Mary King, eventing, and Nick Skelton, jumping, will also make their sixth Olympic appearances for Britain in London.

Amy Oliver is the only British archer making her Olympic debut – her selection over Burgess the only change from the women's team that finished fourth in Beijing in 2008, while the men's trio is unchanged. As a trio Williamson, Folkard – set to compete at her third Games – and Oliver do have pedigree having won silver while representing England at the 2010 Commonwealth Games.

Competition format

In archery athletes aim to shoot arrows as close to the centre of a target, 70m away, as possible.

The target in Olympic archery is 122cm in diameter and has ten concentric scoring zones. The gold ring in the centre is worth ten points but measures just 12.2cm while the white outer ring is worth one point. Arrows that fail to hit a scoring zone result in a score of zero.

At the start of the competition all athletes conduct a ranking round – shooting 72

The oldest and most experienced member of the British archery team for London, Alison Williamson will make a sixth straight Olympic appearance, becoming the fourth Brit to do so. While British teammate Simon Terry took an extended break after his Olympic debut in Barcelona 1992, for Williamson it was the beginning with appearances at every Games since.

Her best performance to date remains her individual bronze medal at Athens 2004 where she became the first British female to win an Olympic archery medal for 96 years. Williamson was introduced to the sport at a young age by her parents but it wasn't until she was 14 that she took to it with any conviction.

Williamson's parents are both keen archers. Father Tom is a coach and a former president of GB Archery while mother Sue is also a coach.

She was awarded a scholarship to study at Arizona State University and trained to become a primary school teacher prior to the Athens Games in 2004.

Williamson lists Sir Chris Hoy as her sporting hero and won team silver at the Commonwealth Games in 2010 alongside Naomi Folkard and Amy Oliver, her London 2012 teammates. She was given a MBE in June as part of the Queen's Birthday Honours List.

Athletics

Introduction

Athletics has always been an integral part of the Olympic programme, dating back to the inaugural ancient Games in 776 BC, and it played a key role in the revival of the modern Games in Athens in 1896 when it was one of nine sports.

At London 2012, the track and field events will take place in the 80,000-seater Olympic Stadium in the heart of the Olympic Park, while the marathons and race walks will start and finish on The Mall, near Buckingham Palace.

There will be 47 athletics events – 24 track, 16 field, two combined and five road – contested with a maximum of three participants in each event from each nation permitted, with a top limit of 2,000 competitors.

I am very proud to have nominated such a strong team of athletes to Team GB. Our collective philosophy since Beijing has been one of raising the bar as we work towards London 2012.

Team GB Athletics Team Leader
Charles van Commenee

Jamaican sprinter Usain Bolt was the stand-out performer at Beijing 2008, winning 100m, 200m and 4x100m gold with a world record in each while previous Games have given rise to numerous international stars.

American sprinter Jesse Owens won four gold medals at Berlin 1936 – a feat matched by compatriot Carl Lewis in 1984 – while Cathy Freeman won 400m gold on home soil at Sydney 2000.

Other athletes to light up the Games include Americans Bob Beamon and Florence Griffith Joyner, Fanny Blankers-Koen of the Netherlands and Abebe Bikila of Ethiopia to name but a few.

Great Britain claimed two medals at Athens 1896 – Grantley Goulding won 110m hurdles silver with Charles Gmelin winning 400m bronze – and in total they have won 188 medals – 49 of which have been gold.

At Beijing 2008, Great Britain won four medals with Christine Ohuruogu winning the only track and field gold in the 400m, adding to her 2007 World Championship title.

Elsewhere, Germaine Mason won high jump silver while Phillips Idowu won triple jump silver and there was a bronze medal for 400m hurdler Tasha Danvers.

Team GB 2012

Team GB will bring the biggest track and field team to an Olympics in 20 years at London 2012 and will arrive in the capital with high hopes of medal success.

Head coach and Team GB athletics team leader Charles van Commenee, who will prepare his team in the Portuguese Algarve, is targeting a return of eight medals including one gold from 78 athletes, which would double the tally achieved four years ago in Beijing.

If successful it would be the best British

It is an incredible feeling to have been selected to be part of Team GB at a home Olympic Games and I'm honoured to be part of it. Every ounce of hard work has been leading towards this point and now I can't wait to get to the start line in the Olympic Stadium.

athletics performance at a Games since 1988 in Seoul, when the squad featured the likes of Daley Thompson, Linford Christie, Colin Jackson and Steve Cram.

British athletes have certainly progressed during the Olympic cycle, winning six medals, including two golds, to finish eighth on the medal table at the 2009 IAAF World Athletics Championships in Berlin.

At the 2011 IAAF World Athletics Championships in Daegu they won seven, including two golds, to move to sixth on the medal table.

In the last three years triple jumper Phillips Idowu and heptathlete Jess Ennis have won world titles, although both narrowly failed to defend their crowns last year, settling for silver.

Dai Greene, in the 400m hurdles, and Mo Farah, in the 5000m, arrive in London as reigning world champions, Farah also winning 10,000m silver last year.

Christine Ohuruogu, the defending Olympic champion in the 400m, is a proven championship performer who consistently peaks when it matters and she's enjoyed a solid and encouraging 2012 season to date. Britain's athletes started Olympic year in style with a record tally of nine medals at the IAAF World Indoor Championships in Istanbul, which ranked them second behind USA.

World marathon record holder Paula Radcliffe becomes only the third British track and field athlete to be selected for five Olympics, joining a club that includes 1984 Los Angeles javelin gold medallist Tessa Sanderson, who competed at six in total, and race walker Chris Maddocks.

Idowu will be attending his fourth Olympic Games along with European silver medallist Christian Malcolm. In addition to Idowu, Team GB athletes will also be strong in a number of other field event disciplines.

Robbie Grabarz has made a breakthrough in international high jumping this year, winning his first Diamond League meeting in Rome and claiming gold at the European Championships in Helsinki.

Long jumpers Greg Rutherford and Shara Proctor should also arrive in top form. Rutherford equalled the British record of 8.35m earlier this year, matching the best jumps in the world in 2012, while Proctor broke Bev Kinch's 29-year-old national record at the Olympic trials.

Holly Bleasdale will look to establish herself among the world's elite pole vaulters, following her huge 4.87m leap during an indoor competition in France earlier this year.

And Goldie Sayers, a ten-time national champion, will be aiming to make the javelin podium, following a fourth in Beijing and at the recent Europeans.

Recent world junior champion Adam Gemili is the youngest member of the team and will be 18 years and 305 days old on the day of the first round of the men's 100m on August 4.

Triple jumper Yamilé Aldama, who won the world indoor title earlier this year, takes the honour of being the team's oldest athlete at 39. She will be just 11 days shy of her 40th birthday when her competition starts on August 3.

WORDS TO LEARN +

CAGE:

The area from which competitors throw a discus or hammer

COUNTBACK:

The process used to determine the winner of a high jump or pole vault competition in which two or more athletes are tied for the best jump. The athlete with the fewer attempts finishes highest

WIND ASSISTANCE:

The legal tailwind assistance for the 100m, 200m, long jump, triple jump, and sprint hurdles is two metres per second. This works out to approximately 4.5mph

FOSBURY FLOP:

A method of high jumping, named after American Dick Fosbury, where the jumper clears the bar by arching their back over it

Competition format

The athletics schedule of 47 events consists of 24 for men, 23 for women and they are divided into four categories – track, field, road and combined events.

The men's track events are 100m, 200m, 400m, 800m, 1500m, 5000m, 10,000m, 110m hurdles, 400m hurdles, 3000m steeplechase, 4x100m relay and 4x400m relay. The field events are high jump, pole vault, long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus, hammer and javelin.

The decathlon, with ten events, is the men's combined event and the marathon as well as the 20km walk and the 50km walk are the road events.

The women's track events are 100m, 200m, 400m, 800m, 1500m, 5000m, 10,000m, 100m hurdles, 400m hurdles, 3000m steeplechase, 4x100m relay and 4x400m relay. The field events are high jump, pole vault, long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus, hammer and javelin.

The combined event is the heptathlon with seven disciplines while the road events are the 20km race walk and the marathon.

The majority of races on the track start with heats, with the fastest athletes progressing to semi-finals and then the final with competitors in the 100m, 200m and 400m using starting blocks as well as those in the men's 110m hurdles, women's 100m hurdles and men's and women's 400m hurdles.

In the 800m competitors run in their designated lanes until the first bend where they break for the inside lane. London 2012 will be the first Olympics where any competitor to false start will be immediately disqualified, with no second chance.

Field events start with a qualification stage, with the best athletes qualifying for the final.

Athletes in the combined events compete to earn points; the amount of points depends on their performance in each of their events. On the road, marathon runners will complete a standard distance of 26 miles and 385 yards while two main rules apply in the race walking disciplines.

The first dictates that the athlete's back toe cannot leave the ground until the heel of the front foot has touched. Violation of this rule is known as loss of contact.

The second rule requires that the supporting leg must straighten from the point of contact with the ground and remain straightened until the body passes directly over it. Three violations of these rules result in disqualification. In the combined events, the men contest the 100m, long jump, shot put, high jump and 400m on day one before competing in the 110m hurdles, discus, pole vault, javelin and 1500m on day two.

The women tackle the 100m hurdles, high jump and shot put on day one with the 200m, long jump, javelin and 800m scheduled for day two.

TEAM GB HERO: DAME KELLY HOLMES +

Dame Kelly Holmes won gold over 800m and 1500m at Athens 2004, four years after winning her first medal, a bronze, over the shorter distance in Sydney.

A double Commonwealth champion, Holmes also won two world silver medals and a bronze in the middle distances, having been inspired to take up athletics by Lord Sebastian Coe.

In 2005 Holmes was appointed a Dame by the Queen and upon her retirement that year, she played a key role in securing the 2012 Olympics as part of London's delegation in Singapore.

Badminton

Badminton

Introduction

British military officers stationed in India are credited with inventing badminton after adding a net to the traditional English game, battledore and shuttlecock. After they brought it back to the UK, badminton was subsequently played at the Duke of Beaufort's Gloucestershire residence, Badminton House, in 1873 while official rules were drawn up in 1877.

Asian nations have dominated since the sport's Olympic inclusion, with China, South Korea and Indonesia winning 23 of the 24 gold medals – Denmark claiming the other – since Barcelona 1992, where badminton featured for the first time.

After staging the 2011 World Championships, Wembley Arena will host 172 shuttlers – 86 men and 86 women – who will contest five events.

● This is a young team with huge potential and after a full year of very tough Olympic qualification everybody deserves to be a part of Team GB. ●

GB Badminton Head Coach
Kenneth Jonassen

After limited success at Barcelona 1992 and Atlanta 1996, Jo Goode and Simon Archer became the first British badminton players to win an Olympic medal with mixed doubles bronze at Sydney 2000.

At Athens 2004, Gail Emms and Nathan Robertson were the first Brits to reach a final, winning mixed doubles silver after defeat to China's Zhang Jun and Gao Ling.

Of the six Brits who competed at Beijing

2008, Emms and Robertson progressed the furthest but were defeated in the quarter-finals by South Korea's Lee Yong-Dae and Lee Hyo-Jung in the first Olympics to feature the 'rally point' scoring system.

Great Britain's overall Olympic medal tally remains at two but Gillian Gilks and Derek Talbot won mixed doubles gold at Munich 1972 when badminton was a demonstration sport, as it was in Seoul 1988.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will be represented by Rajiv Ouseph in the men's singles, Susan Egelstaff in the women's singles and Chris Adcock and Imogen Bankier in the mixed doubles at London 2012.

Two members of the squad, Egelstaff and Bankier, are Scottish while all four will be making their Olympic debuts at London 2012. All reached London 2012 by achieving their relevant qualification criteria in the May 3 world rankings, when the year-long qualification period closed.

In the three doubles competitions, each nation is permitted one of the 16 places, or two if both pairs were in the world's top eight on May 3. Only Adcock and Bankier, tenth in the world, were able to qualify for Team GB in mixed doubles.

Knowing that neither they, nor Athens 2004 silver medallist Nathan Robertson and his partner Jenny Wallwork would reach the top eight, the two pairs vied for the one British spot. Adcock and Bankier seized momentum with their world silver medal last year and

At the Malaysia Open in January, Bankier and Adcock lost to their British rivals but beat them at the Swiss Open in March and crucially at April's European Championships en route to bronze in Sweden.

With 172 athletes competing in the London 2012 badminton event, the number of singles players is decided by subtracting the number of doubles players from 172 and distributed between the men's and women's competitions.

With Ouseph ranking 19th in the world on May 3 he comfortably secured his place while Egelstaff, who injured her knee last September and spent three months on the sidelines, edged out Liz Cann to qualify – ranking 36th on May 3 to Cann's 48th.

Ouseph won his fifth consecutive English National crown this year and won the prestigious US Open in 2010. He also won Commonwealth Games silver in 2010, losing in the final to then world No.1 Lee Chong Wei of Malaysia.

Egelstaff claimed Commonwealth Games bronze at Melbourne 2006, while she and Bankier are Scotland's first badminton Olympians since Anne Gibson at Atlanta 1996. Adcock and Andrew Ellis finished the qualification period in 23rd place but once national and continental allocations were taken into account, they were listed as first reserves in the men's doubles competition.

Competition format

Olympic badminton consists of five events – men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, women's doubles and mixed doubles. After a successful trial at the 2010 Youth Olympics in Singapore, for the first time there will be a combination of group and knockout stages at London 2012.

In the singles, the top 16 from the group stage will qualify for the knockout rounds while in doubles the top eight will advance. The last two participants in the knockout phase compete for gold and silver while the losing semi-finalists play for bronze.

Matches are played over the best of three games, and each game is won by the first player or doubles pairing to reach 21 points by a margin of two clear points. However, if the score reaches 29-29, the winner of the next point wins the game.

London 2012 will be the second Olympic Games to feature the 'rally point' scoring system which allows players to win points on their opponents' serve.

The badminton court is 6.1m wide and 13.4m long with different markings for singles and doubles matches. Doubles matches use the full width of the court but have a smaller service area while singles courts are the same length but 5.18m wide.

TEAM GB HERO: GAIL EMMS AND NATHAN ROBERTSON

The stars of British badminton, Gail Emms and Nathan Robertson's on-court chemistry had the nation on the edge of their seats at Athens 2004 after becoming the first Brits to reach an Olympic final. Emms and Robertson beat Denmark's Rikke Olsen and Jonas Rasmussen in the semi-final but were initially overawed in the final against China's Zhang Jun and Gao Ling, losing the first game 15-1. The Brits recovered to take the next 15-12 but lost the decider by the same score. They did however go on to win gold at the 2006 World Championships and at the 2006 Commonwealth Games. Their Olympic swansong at Beijing 2008 ended with quarter-final defeat to eventual winners Lee Hyo-Jung and Lee Yong-Dae of South Korea.

Basketball

Introduction

After it was paraded as a demonstration sport at St Louis 1904, basketball joined the Olympic schedule at Berlin 1936 and has been a regular fixture ever since with women's basketball beginning in 1976.

The London 2012 event will be split between the Basketball Arena in the Olympic Park, which will host the initial group phases and the women's quarter-finals, while the men's quarter-finals and all semi-finals and finals will take place at North Greenwich Arena.

The USA have been the dominant force in Olympic basketball and their men's teams have won 13 of 16 tournaments they have

The Soviet Union themselves won again in 1988 but Barcelona 1992 saw the inclusion of NBA players and the advent of the USA's 'Dream Team' which won gold by an average winning margin of 44 points.

Again the USA won in 1996 and 2000 but they suffered only their third defeat in Olympic history at Athens 2004 to eventual winners Argentina before regaining gold at Beijing 2008.

In the women's competition, the Soviet Union won the first two titles in 1976 and 1980, while the Unified Team were victorious in 1992 – the USA have won the other six gold medals.

Team GB 2012

Team GB will appear in their first Olympic men's basketball tournament since 1948, while the women's squad make their Games debut.

Since London was awarded the right to stage the Olympics, the progress on the court has been strong.

The British men's team qualified for the EuroBasket finals for the first time ever in 2009 and last year recorded their first victories at the prestigious event, beating Poland and Portugal in Lithuania.

At last year's Olympic test event they also beat world number ten side China and were narrowly defeated by Serbia, ranked

Boxing

Boxing

The Team GB boxing squad at their training base in Sheffield

Introduction

While men's boxing will be making its 24th Olympic appearance at London 2012 at ExCeL, women's boxing will be making its first after an IOC ruling in 2009.

In total, 250 men will compete across ten weight categories, scaled down from 11 at Beijing 2008, with featherweight removed from the schedule and the weight limit for light fly, fly and bantam raised slightly to compensate. A total of 36 women will compete in three weight categories.

Men's boxing has been part of every summer Olympics since its introduction in 1904, except for Stockholm 1912 as Swedish law banned the sport at the time.

Great Britain have a proud Olympic boxing tradition since 1904, claiming 14 gold medals, 11 silvers and 23 bronzes – including a clean sweep of all but one of the weight categories at London 1908.

Amir Khan was the only British boxer at Athens 2004 but he won lightweight silver, losing to Cuba's defending champion Mario Kindelan in the final.

Audley Harrison became the first British gold medallist for 32 years at Sydney 2000, following middleweight Chris Finnegan in 1968, while James DeGale also won middleweight gold at Beijing 2008.

Thanks to DeGale's gold and bronze medals for Tony Jeffries and David Price, Beijing was Great Britain's most successful boxing haul for 52 years.

Team GB 2012

As world silver medallists, Andrew Selby, Luke Campbell and Anthony Joshua will lead Great Britain's hopes as Rob McCracken takes a ten-strong team to ExCeL – all of whom will be making their Olympic debuts.

Flyweight Selby, bantamweight Campbell and super heavyweight Joshua all won silver at the 2011 World Championships in Baku while light welterweight Tom Stalker won bronze as the Commonwealth Games gold medallist became the first British boxer to qualify for London 2012.

Campbell's qualification was assured in Baku after making sure of a last-eight place while Joshua, courtesy of reaching the final, and welterweight Fred Evans also booked their spots in Azerbaijan.

Selby had to defeat Beijing Olympian Khalid Yafai in a best-of-three match to make sure of his spot last November, prevailing 2-0.

In 2008 Campbell became the first Englishman in 47 years to win the European Amateur Championships, while at the 2011 World Championships he won silver after losing to Lazaro Alvarez of Cuba who will head to London as favourite for gold.

Scotland's Commonwealth Games silver medallist Josh Taylor became the sixth Brit to qualify for London 2012 by reaching the semi-finals of the lightweight competition at the European Olympic qualifying tournament in Trabzon, Turkey in April.

And Anthony Ogogo became Great Britain's seventh and final male qualifier when he reached the middleweight final in Trabzon, eventually winning silver. It marked the end of an arduous road to recovery for Ogogo, who badly injured his shoulder in 2007, and again at the 2011 World Championships, before returning to qualify.

Lightweight Natasha Jonas became the first British female boxer in Olympic history to qualify for the Games by reaching the semi-finals of the World Championships in China in May. She eventually won bronze. Jonas was quickly followed by flyweight Nicola Adams, who beat India's five-time world champion Mery Kom to reach the semis, before winning silver.

Savannah Marshall made sure Great Britain will have the maximum quota of three female boxers in London by reaching the middleweight final at the World Championships, going on to win gold.

Competition format

Male boxers compete over three three-minute rounds across ten weight categories from light flyweight to super heavyweight, while female boxers will contest four two-minute rounds across three weight divisions – flyweight, lightweight, middleweight.

One boxer per nation is permitted to compete in each event while boxers must be aged between 17 and 34 and are weighed every day.

A boxer is awarded victory for knocking out their opponent or scoring the most points. Points are awarded for every punch landed with the knuckle of the glove on their opponent's head or upper body.

A knock-out occurs when a boxer is unable to get up after ten seconds, having been knocked to the ground. Points are awarded if three of the five judges on the panel press their electronic buttons at the same time.

The referee can warn a boxer for holding, punching in the lower region or kidneys and punching without the protection of a glove and the referee can disqualify a boxer who has received three warnings.

If a boxer is knocked to the ground and gets up he or she will receive a 'mandatory eight (second) count' during which the referee decides if the fighter is fit to continue.

If the referee decides it is too dangerous for a boxer to continue, the bout will be awarded to the opponent. The referee will then classify the fight RSC – referee stopped contest, or RSCH – referee stopped contest due to head blows.

In the event of a tie, the lowest and highest scores awarded by the five judges for each boxer are removed. The boxer with the highest total score from the remaining three judges is determined the winner. If it is still a tie, all five judges vote and the boxer with the majority vote wins.

Each boxer is given a corner, labelled red or blue. This is also the colour of the clothing they wear to fight. All fighters must also wear gloves, protective headgear and mouthguards.

The women's and the men's categories – excluding heavyweight and super heavyweight – contest preliminary rounds before all 13 weights enter rounds of 16, progressing to a final. Both losing semi-finalists receive bronze medals.

I can remember being in the gym back in 2008 when the lads that were going to Beijing got all of their kit and, while I was pleased for them, I was also very envious. It made me determined to qualify for 2012.

Canoeing

Introduction

Canoeing is split into two disciplines – canoe slalom and canoe sprint – with the former set to be held at the purpose-built Lee Valley White Water Centre and the latter at Eton Dorney. Modelled on slalom skiing, canoe slalom made its Olympic debut at Munich 1972 but wasn't to feature again until Barcelona 1992, where it has remained since.

Canoe sprint first featured as a demonstration sport in Paris in 1924 before earning full status 12 years later and has been part of the schedule ever since. A canoe slalom competition is based on time trials on white water while sprint races are head-to-head on still water and range in distance from 200m to 1000m.

Each discipline has events for both canoes (C) whereby athletes kneel and use single-bladed paddles and kayaks (K) in which

● Having five athletes selected covering all of the four classes is a great achievement and a significant improvement on Beijing. However we know that this is only the first part of the process. ●

competitors sit and use paddles with blades at both ends. However, the boats used do differ between the two disciplines with the canoe sprint craft long and streamlined and the canoe slalom small, light and agile.

The Olympic canoe slalom programme remains unchanged from Beijing 2008; however the canoe sprint has seen three of the four men's 500m events replaced by a shorter 200m distance. The men's C2 500m has been replaced by the women's K1 200m meaning for the first time women will compete in two individual events.

Team GB 2012

In total Great Britain will be represented by 15 athletes – five in the slalom discipline and ten in the sprint events. David Florence, who won Olympic C1 silver at Beijing 2008, heads up the canoe slalom quintet and will add the C2, with Richard Hounslow, to his repertoire in London. Because both Florence and Hounslow qualified individually courtesy of wins in the C1 and K1 respectively at the trials, international rules allow Britain to field a second C2 team, which will consist of Etienne Stott and Tim Baillie.

Lizzie Neave will compete in the sole women's event, the K1, as Britain look to add to their haul of five medals won since canoe slalom was consistently introduced to the Olympic programme at Barcelona 1992. Britain failed to win a single medal in Olympic boats at the 2011 World Championships while at the canoe sprint equivalent two were collected in the Olympic classes.

Olympic champion Tim Brabants heads up the British canoe sprint team after winning a tight selection battle with Paul Wycherley in the men's K1 1000m. A three-time Olympian with two bronze medals also to his name, Brabants won the nation's first-ever canoeing Olympic gold medal at Beijing 2008. Jessica Walker is the only other athlete retained from Beijing the event. He is the world champion from 2010 while his silver medal at last year's worlds was one of the two won by Britain in the Olympic classes. McKeever also won European bronze last year, repeating the trick in Croatia this June, while he won three gold medals from his two World Cup appearances this year.

Jon Schofield and Liam Heath – the other medallists at last year's World Championships where they took K2 200m silver – are also in form with two World Cup silver medals from this year as well as a third successive European title, won in June. Richard Jefferies will be the only non-kayaker while Abigail Edmonds was the last athlete selected after Britain were awarded an additional women's host nation place. Edmonds will compete in the women's K2 500m with Sawers and her selection taking the canoe sprint team to ten – Britain's largest at an Olympics since Barcelona 1992.

Competition format

In both disciplines athletes take part in heats, semi-finals and finals with slalom consisting of timed runs down a white-water course with up to 25 gates. Gates, two hanging polls from a string across the course, are coloured as either green, which must be negotiated downstream, or red, which must be negotiated upstream. A two-second time penalty is given for touching a gate. Missing a gate, displacing it by more than 45 degrees, going through it upside down or in the wrong order accrues a 50-second penalty.

The time taken to run the course in seconds is added to any penalties to give the overall score. In the heats each canoeist completes two runs with the best time out of the two counting. The top boats advance to the semi-finals and then the final, with both comprising of one run. The start order of the semi-final will be the reverse order of the results of the heats. The start order of the final will be the reverse order of the results of the semi-final run.

In canoe sprint the format of the competition depends on how many boats are competing in each event with entrants across all 12 Olympic events being at a minimum of ten but never exceeding 14.

In events with ten boats, the men's K2 1000m, K2 200m and K4 1000m and women's K2 500m and K4 500m, the competition starts with two heats with the winners progressing straight to the final. The remaining eight boats compete in one semi-final with the best six progressing to the final.

Events with 11 to 14 boats also start with two heats but differ from then on in. In the only event in which there are 12 entrants at London 2012, the men's C2 1000m, the heat winners progress to the final. The remaining boats take part in semi-finals with the top three from each reaching the final.

In events with 13 to 14 boats no one progresses straight to the final. The men's K1 1000m, K1 200m, C1 1000m and C1 200m and women's K1 500m and K1 200m will adopt this approach with the first five from the heats progressing to two semi-finals. Once in the semi-finals, the top four boats in each one will advance to the final.

It will be amazing to be part of a home Games and a great opportunity to showcase all the talented athletes in the sport of canoeing to the public.

David Florence is the only one of the five British athletes selected to compete in canoe slalom in London to have experienced an Olympics before – winning silver in the C1 at Beijing 2008. However he will also experience a first having qualified in the canoe double with Richard Hounslow, three years after first choosing to combine the event with his individual aspirations.

Born in Aberdeen, Florence lived on Wester Coates Avenue in Edinburgh between the ages of seven and 18, then a mere street away from a young Chris Hoy, whose residence was on Wester Coates Terrace. Seeing Hoy win triple gold at Beijing 2008 inspired Florence to add another event to his repertoire in the form of the canoe double where he won world and European medals in his first year doing it.

Florence studied mathematical physics at the University of Nottingham and applied to be an astronaut before Beijing 2008 after seeing a recruitment advert for the European Space Agency. He won the overall World Cup title in the C1 in 2009 and in the 2012 World Cup series he has won two golds and a silver and is currently ranked world No.1 in the C1. His dad George was a former Scottish canoeing champion and his brother Fraser also competed internationally.

Cycling

● We have selected what I believe to be an excellent team going into an Olympic Games and we have a good mix of experienced Olympians alongside young riders who are making their Olympic debut. The GB Cycling Team has had a strong season across all the disciplines and we are ready to step up again at the Olympics. ●

Team GB Cycling Team Leader Dave Brailsford CBE

Cycling

Introduction

Cycling is among the few sports to have featured at every modern Olympic Games and at London 2012 there will be four disciplines – BMX, mountain biking, road and track.

The ten track events, five for men and five for women, will be held in the London Velodrome and the men's and women's BMX competitions will be held at the neighbouring BMX Track. The mountain bike races will take place at Hadeleigh Farm in Essex.

The road races begin on The Mall and head to Surrey for several circuits – nine for the men, two for the women – of a 15.5km loop around Box Hill. The time trials start and finish at Hampton Court Palace.

Men's track cycling has been part of the Olympic programme since 1896 but did not feature at Stockholm 1912 while women took to the track for the first time at Seoul 1988.

There was one men's road race at Athens 1896 but the event did not feature again until 1912, while women made their road debut at Los Angeles 1984.

For men and women, mountain biking appeared first at Atlanta 1996 while BMX made its Olympic debut at Beijing 2008.

France have won the most Olympic medals while Great Britain are the third most successful nation behind Italy. At Barcelona 1992, Chris Boardman won Great Britain's first Olympic cycling gold medal for 72 years while Jason Queally was next to top the podium at Sydney 2000.

At Athens 2004, Sir Chris Hoy and Bradley Wiggins won their first Olympic gold medals and at Beijing 2008, Great Britain collected 14 medals, including eight golds.

Hoy won three of those golds to become Great Britain's most successful Olympian at a single Games for 100 years, matching swimmer Henry Taylor's 1908 feat.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain won 13 medals at the UCI Track Cycling World Championships in April, including six golds, of which five were in Olympic disciplines.

The winners were Sir Chris Hoy in the men's keirin, the men's team pursuit quartet, Victoria Pendleton in the women's individual sprint and Laura Trott, who won omnium gold and also made up the trio who claimed women's team pursuit gold.

Reade, a four-time world champion, and Phillips both crashed at the 2012 World Championships in Birmingham in May, Phillips breaking his collarbone.

In the mountain bike, Liam Killeen makes a second Olympic appearance, having recovered from an early crash to finish seventh in Beijing, while world under-23 silver medallist Annie Last makes her Olympic debut.

And in the road events, world road race champion Mark Cavendish will be assisted by four of the riders who helped him to victory in Copenhagen last September – Bradley Wiggins, David Millar, Ian Stannard and Chris Froome. Three-time Olympic track champion Wiggins, who won time trial silver in Copenhagen, and Froome will also contest the time trial.

The women will be led by Commonwealth Games silver medallist Lizzie Armitstead and Olympic champion Nicole Cooke in the road race, alongside Emma Pooley and youngster Lucy Martin. Both Pooley, who won silver at Beijing 2008, and Armitstead will also take part in the time trial.

Beijing Olympian Ross Edgar and Becky James have been named as reserves for the track while Kyle Evans and Abby Taylor are BMX reserves.

Competition format

There are 18 events on the Olympic cycling schedule, spread across the BMX, mountain bike, road and track, and in total over 500 athletes will participate.

In the BMX events, there is a men's, competition for 32 riders and a women's competition for 16 riders, where competitors start on an 8m-high ramp and cover a course that features, bumps, jumps and tightly banked corners. The men's event is limited to three riders per nation, the women's two.

Both the men's and the women's competitions start with a seeding phase where each competitor rides the course – 470m for the men and 430m for the women – once to determine the seedings.

The women progress straight to semi-finals and the men's event continues with quarter-finals, which are held over five runs, with points for places on each run.

After three runs the best two male riders from each quarter-final progress to the semi-finals. The remaining riders compete in the final two runs and the best two from each also progress to the semi-finals. From here, the semi-finals in both the men's and women's events follow a three-run format. The top four riders from each semi-final advance to the final, where the medals are decided over one run.

The mountain biking competition consists of a men's and women's cross-country race, with 50 men and 30 women taking part and nations limited to a maximum of three men and two women.

The London 2012 course is 4.7km long, has an elevation change of 172m with each lap and features rocky paths, tricky climbs and technical descents. Each race begins with a starting loop of 441m.

All riders start together – seeded into a starting grid according to world rankings – and must complete a set number of laps of the course. The first to cross the finish line is the winner.

On the road, there will be 212 competitors – 145 men and 67 women – and each nation is limited to five men and four women, including a maximum of two per gender for the time trials. The men's road race is 250km and the women's 140km, while the men's time trial course is 44km, and 29km for women.

For the road race all competitors start together; the first rider to cross the finish line wins gold. For the shorter time trial, the riders start at 90-second intervals and the winner is the rider with the fastest time.

The road race starts on The Mall before the riders head south-west, crossing the River Thames at Putney Bridge and continuing out through Richmond Park, Bushy Park and past Hampton Court Palace. The Surrey section of the course incorporates several circuits of a loop around Box Hill before heading north through Leatherhead, Esher, Kingston-upon-Thames, Richmond Park and back to The Mall for the finish.

The time trial starts and finishes at Hampton Court Palace in south-west London, and incorporates sections of Richmond, Kingston and Surrey. Both events are held over a single lap, with slight variations in the men's and women's courses reflecting the different distances.

The ten track events, spread equally for men and women, differ from those contested in Beijing where there were seven male events and three female.

Both the men's and women's individual pursuits and points races and men's madison have been removed, while a women's team sprint, women's team pursuit, women's keirin and an omnium for both genders have been added. That leaves the men's and women's individual sprints and men's team pursuit, team sprint and keirin remaining from the Beijing 2008 programme.

In total, there will be 104 men and 84 women taking part with each country limited to nine men and seven women, equating to one athlete or team in each event. The one athlete or team per nation per event ruling was introduced following Beijing 2008.

The track at the London 2012 Velodrome is a 250m oval, banked from 12 degrees at its shallowest point to 42 degrees at its steepest.

The individual sprint starts with a 200m time trial to determine the seedings for the first round. From then on riders are paired up to compete against each other in a knockout competition, going to quarter-

● I am very proud and excited to be officially selected as a member of the Team GB track cycling team. London 2012 will be my third Olympic Games and to have the opportunity to compete at a home Olympics is amazing. ● finals, semi-finals and a final, which are all best of three races.

The keirin features up to seven riders sprinting for victory, after following a pacing motorcycle – known as a derny – at the beginning of the race. It starts with heats and repechages after which the best 12 riders progress to round two. The top six then reach the final with the bottom six racing for places seven to 12.

The team sprint starts with a qualifying round, with the best eight teams going forward to the first round whereby those ranked fourth fastest race off against the fifth fastest, those third against sixth, those second against seventh and those quickest against those slowest.

The four winning teams in the first round contest the medals, with the two teams with the fastest times competing for gold, and the other two teams going head-to-head for bronze.

The team pursuit – 4km or 16 laps for men and 3km or 12 laps for women – starts with a qualifying round. Teams are seeded in the first round according to their qualifying times – the fastest team competes against the fourth fastest, second competes against third, fifth against eighth and sixth against seventh.

The winners of the two heats between the top four teams advance to the finals; the remaining six teams are ranked according to their times from the first round, with the best two teams competing for bronze.

The omnium consists of six events: the flying lap against the clock; a points race – 30km for men and 20km for women – where riders score points for sprints which occur every ten laps or for lapping the field; an elimination race which is a bunch race with an intermediate sprint every two laps where the last rider each time is eliminated; an individual pursuit – 4km for men, 3km for women – against the clock; a scratch race – 16km for men, 10km for women – another bunch race where the first across the line wins and a time trial – 1km for men, 500m for women – against the clock.

In each event the winner gets one point, the second placed rider gets two points, the third three points, and so on. At the end of all six events the rider with the lowest total score is the winner.

TEAM GB HERO: CHRIS BOARDMAN

Chris Boardman won individual pursuit gold at the Barcelona 1992 Olympics, Great Britain's first cycling medal since Montreal 1976 and first gold since Thomas Lance and Harry Ryan won the tandem event at Antwerp 1920.

Boardman opted against defending his crown at Atlanta 1996 but he did win time trial bronze on the road while he also wore the Tour de France's yellow jersey on three different occasions.

Nicknamed the Professor, for his meticulous attention to detail when preparing for races, Boardman also won the individual pursuit world title on the track twice and was crowned world time trial champion on the road in 1994. He was awarded an MBE in 1992.

In 2006, Cooke reached the top of the world rankings with a third La Flèche Wallonne victory as well as a first win in La Grande Boucle – the women's Tour de France – and she successfully defended it a year later.

At the end of the 2007 season she suffered a knee injury which almost caused her to quit cycling but she recovered to win the world and Olympic title in 2008.

pursuit gold at Beijing 2008. He also has six world track titles to his name but after Beijing, and after the removal of the individual pursuit from the Olympic schedule, he switched his attentions to the road and in 2009 he finished fourth in the Tour de France - matching Robert Millar's best ever finish in the race by a Brit.

In 2009 he was awarded a CBE and in 2010 he joined Team Sky and while the Tour de France didn't go to plan that year, he looked in excellent shape in 2011 before he broke his collarbone early on in the race. He recovered to finish third in the Vuelta a Espana later that year.

At last year's World Championships in Copenhagen, Wiggins played an instrumental role in helping Mark Cavendish to road race gold, while he also won time trial silver and he will contest both events in London.

In 2012 he has won both the Paris-Nice and the Tour de Romandie and he successfully defended his Critérium du Dauphiné title, becoming the only cyclist in history to win all three races in the same season. He began the Tour de France among the favourites for victory.

After a disappointing Athens 2004 Olympic debut, Victoria Pendleton won individual sprint gold at the 2008 Beijing Olympics and she currently has nine world titles to her name.

At London 2012, she is expected to go for gold on three fronts with the addition of the women's keirin and women's team sprint.

In 2009 she placed 84th in FHM magazine's 100 sexiest women while she has a tattoo on her right wrist that reads "Today is the greatest day I've ever known" – a lyric by the Smashing Pumpkins.

Rewarded with an MBE in 2009, Pendleton wants to own an allotment after the London 2012 Olympics.

She also plans to marry Scott Gardner, a former sports scientist with the British Cycling coaching team, after London 2012.

He also helped Mark Cavendish win the world road race title in 2011 before revealing he would be focusing on the track in 2012.

Equestrian

Equestrian

Introduction

Equestrian is broken down into dressage, eventing and jumping at the Olympics and is the only sport on the programme where men and women compete together in every single event on equal terms.

The sport made its debut at Paris 1900 when jumping (individual) was introduced but it wasn't until Stockholm 1912 that the three disciplines we see today properly took their place on the Olympic schedule.

Individual and team events in eventing and jumping as well as individual dressage will have been contested at the Olympics for 100 years as of London 2012.

Team dressage wasn't introduced until 1928 but has featured at all bar Rome 1960 since. The equestrian component of modern pentathlon is the only other Olympic sport involving animals. For the 1956 Games, the equestrian events were held in Stockholm rather than host city Melbourne, due to Australia's strict quarantine requirements while in 2008 the events took place in Hong Kong rather than Beijing due to the high levels of equine disease in the Chinese capital.

British dressage competitor Laura Bechtolsheimer on her horse Mistral Hojris

Competitors must be 18-years-old to enter jumping and eventing or 16-years-old to contest the dressage events. The horses themselves must also be of a certain age, at least eight to compete in dressage or nine to compete in jumping. All horses must have an official passport approved by the International Equestrian Federation. Horses must be the same nationality as the riders.

Until the Helsinki Games in 1952 only male cavalry officers were permitted to compete, these restrictions were lifted thereafter with both male civilians and women allowed to participate.

Dressage entails demonstrating a horse's responsiveness to rider commands through a series of prearranged movements while jumping consists of tackling a course of obstacles.

Eventing consists of three parts: dressage, cross-country – whereby competitors try to master a course consisting of up to 45 jumps – and jumping.

While Germany are the most successful equestrian nation, Britain have won medals at 13 of their last 16 Games.

Of the six golds won by Britain, five have come from eventing and the other from jumping but of the all-time medal haul of 27, dressage hasn't contributed once.

Team GB 2012

Britain will have a 13-strong equestrian team at London 2012 with five eventing, four dressage and four jumping athletes selected.

Mary King leads the eventing team and will make her sixth straight Olympic appearance while there is further Games

WORDS TO LEARN +

DRESSAGE

AID:

A prompt that a rider gives to a horse to change gait or turn. This can be done using the hands, legs or through a shift in body weight

HALF-PASS:

When a horse moves forwards and sideways at the same time, bent in the direction of movement

PIAFFE:

A trotting movement, performed almost on the spot

EVENTING

RUN-OUT:

When a horse runs around a fence instead of jumping over it

OPTIMUM TIME:

The target time in cross-country; each second above carries a penalty of 0.4 faults

JUMPING

REFUSAL:

When a horse stops at a jump, incurring faults

TRIPLE COMBINATION:

Three fences in close proximity, with just a few steps between them experience in William Fox-Pitt and Kristina Cook. All three attended Beijing 2008 where Britain won team bronze with Cook winning individual bronze as well while Fox-Pitt will compete at his fourth Olympics and has a team silver from Athens 2004.

The cross-country course in eventing is between 5,700m and 6,840m long

● Big Star is a placid, easy-going horse and doesn't seem to mind the big occasions so I wouldn't think Greenwich will faze him too much. ●

Nick Skelton

King has the same Olympic medal haul while Zara Phillips, the Queen's granddaughter, will finally become an Olympian after missing both Athens 2004 and Beijing 2008 following injury to her horse Toytown.

Piggy French suffered a similar fate at the start of July with Nicola Wilson called up as her replacement. Britain enter as the reigning world champions in the team event.

Dressage was the second of the three equestrian disciplines to announce their team and also contains a wealth of Olympic experience with Carl Hester and Richard Davison both set for their fourth Games. Laura Bechtolsheimer will compete at her second Games with Charlotte Dujardin the only one of the four to be making her Olympic debut.

Unlike the eventers, Britain have never won an Olympic dressage medal but are showing good form leading into London 2012 winning team silver at the World Equestrian Games in 2010 and European gold last year.

Hester won two individual silver medals at the 2011 Europeans while Bechtolsheimer, who took bronze, also won double individual silver at the World Equestrian Games in 2010.

The jumping team was the last of the three to be announced with Nick Skelton, like King, set for his sixth Olympic appearance after outings at Seoul, Barcelona, Atlanta, Athens and Beijing.

Like Scott Brash, Peter Charles will make his Olympic debut for Britain at London 2012 but he does have previous Games experience with Ireland.

He attended Barcelona 1992 and Atlanta 1996 with Ireland, becoming eligible through his Irish mother, while Ben Maher joins Skelton in being retained from Beijing 2008.

Britain once again have reason to believe their jumpers can medal in London winning team bronze at last year's European Championships while Skelton individually collected the same colour. Tina Fletcher and Hello Sailor act as the travelling reserve.

Competition format

In dressage the horse and rider's series of movements, known as tests, are performed in front of a judging panel awarding scores for the individual elements and overall routine.

Taking place in a 60m by 20m sand-based area there are three rounds – Grand Prix, Grand Prix Special and Grand Prix Freestyle.

In the first two, movements are set in compulsory order, while in the third, the rider chooses an individual programme set to music.

The team, made up of three competitors, and individual events are run concurrently with a rider's score in a test relevant for both events.

The Grand Prix and Grand Prix Special events take place first with team medals decided by the total of the scores in both, averaged out between the three riders, while individual podium places are decided after the Grand Prix Freestyle.

After the Grand Prix phase the best seven teams, including any tied for seventh, and best 11 individuals, including any tied for 11th, not part of a team, progress to the Grand Prix Special. While team medals are decided when the Grand Prix Special finishes, the best 18 individuals, including any tied for 18th, based solely on the Grand Prix Special advance to the Grand Prix Freestyle.

Only the top three athletes from any nation may contest the individual final. Performances in the Grand Prix Freestyle determine the gold, silver and bronze individual medals. The average score of the final two rounds decides the final placings.

The eventing competition takes place over four days with scores cumulative across all three phases and the best total determining the winner.

It starts with the dressage element, which covers the first two days, whereby the total score is converted into penalty points and carried onto the cross-country.

The cross-country course will span Greenwich Park and contain up to 45 jumps. Any jumping errors and time infringements are added to the penalty points carried over from the dressage. Eventing concludes with the jumping phase. Penalty points are awarded for jumping errors (primarily lowering rails) and exceeding the allowed time, these are added to the points carried forward from the previous two phases with the lowest score determining the winner from the overall score.

There are two jumping tests, one to decide team medallists and the other to decide the individuals. Teams can be made up of five combinations with the best three scores counting towards the medal total.

After the first jumping test, which decided the team medallists, the top 25 and any tied on 25th advance to the second round of jumping to decide individual placings. Penalties incurred here are cumulative and added to those incurred in dressage, cross country and team jumping rounds. Only the top three athletes from any nation may go forward to the individual round.

All riders compete in round one with the best 60 individuals, including any tied for 60th, advancing along with all team riders ranked lower than 60.

Round two also acts as the first of the team competition and sees the best 45 individuals, including any tied for 45th, determined by the combined scores of both outings so far, progress.

The best eight teams and any tied for eighth from this round only also reach round three, where the final placings are decided by the sum of the scores from rounds two and three.

The final individual competition is conducted over two rounds – A and B; in round A the combined best 35 and any tied for 35th, limited to a maximum of three per country, progressing to the penultimate round.

In round four, the best 20, including any tied for 20th, from round A compete for the individual title. Scores from round B are then added to those in round A to decide the medallists. If two or more riders happen to be tied within the top three a jump-off takes place to break the tie.

No other British equestrian competitor is more successful at an Olympics than Meade, who also attended the 1964 and 1976 Games. He once dated Princess Anne.

He suffered a serious neck injury in September 2000 that forced him to retire on the advice of leading neuro-surgeons.

However Skelton was to make a full recovery and returned to the sport in 2002; he was awarded an OBE for his services to equestrian sport in the Queen's Birthday Honours list this year.

A multiple world and European medallist Skelton won the World Cup final with Dollar Girl in 1995 and holds the British record for jumping the highest fence – 7ft 7ins at Olympia in 1978.

Fencing

Fencing

Introduction

Fencing is one of just five sports to have featured at every Olympics since the formation of the modern Games with athletics, cycling, swimming and gymnastics being the other four.

Fencing is broken down into three forms named after the blade weapon used in each – foil, épée and sabre – the latter appearing at every Games since Athens 1896.

Women didn't compete until Paris 1924 and only then were they allowed to compete in the individual foil event. At London 2012 there are ten medal events, incorporating individual and team competitions.

The foil measures 110cm while the épée is the same length but heavier and derives from the court sword. The sabre is the shortest at 105cm and originates from the cavalry sword. All events take place on a 14-metre long piste.

There are two changes to the Olympic programme from Beijing 2008, with the men's team foil replacing the team épée and the women's team épée replacing the team sabre.

DID YOU KNOW?

At Antwerp 1920, Italy's Nedo Nadi became the only fencer ever to win a gold medal with every weapon at a single Olympics

Nations are allowed to select eight men and eight women in total, with a maximum of three per gender in the foil events and likewise in the men's sabre and women's épée events, as team competitions are also contested in these. That leaves two men eligible for the individual épée and two women for the individual sabre with 212 athletes in total set to compete in London. That includes the eight host nation places handed to Britain – who haven't won an Olympic medal since Bill Hoskyns' individual épée silver in 1964 – as host nation.

Gillian Sheen remains Britain's only ever Olympic gold medallist, winning the individual foil title in 1956, while Judy Guinness' honesty in 1932 cost her becoming the first. She twice acknowledged a hit made by her opponent not seen by the judges and lost.

Italy have won the most gold medals since Athens 1896 with 45 but France hold the record for most medals won with 115.

Team GB 2012

Team GB will have a team of ten fencers in London – two of which qualified in their own right and eight through host nation places. The ten selected athletes branch across all three fencing disciplines with six chosen in the foil, three in the sabre and one in the épée.

Foil fencer Richard Kruse, who along with Natalia Sheppard qualified for the Games outright, will make his third Olympic appearance. He is the only surviving member of the British team that competed at Beijing 2008.

Kruse qualified through his world ranking after winning a satellite event in Denmark in March while James Davis and Husayn Rosowsky are the other two male athletes selected in the foil.

Davis is the only British fencer to ever win a medal at the European Cadet Championships – bronze in 2008 – and Rosowsky is the current British champion. They, along with Kruse, will compete in the individual event as well as coming together as a team. Sheppard heads up the three women selected for the foil and, like Kruse, she booked her Olympic place by right after winning the final European qualifying event in Bratislava in April.

Anna Bentley and Sophie Troiano join her in competing individually and in the foil team event after their places on Team GB were confirmed during the second wave of selections.

Aside from Kruse, Louise Bond-Williams is the only other member of the team to have Olympic experience having competed at Athens 2004, and she will compete in the sabre once again. Sophie Williams joins her as the second female sabre competitor while James Honeybone is the only male selected for that discipline. Corinna Lawrence is the sole athlete selected for the épée.

DID YOU KNOW?

At London 2012, 35 pistes will be used during competition

Martina Emanuel, who competed at Beijing 2008, is a reserve for the women's foil team and Laurence Halsted is the men's foil team reserve.

Competition format

In the foil and épée, points are scored by hitting an opponent with the tip of the weapon while in the sabre, the cutting weapon, hits can be scored with both the point and side of the blade. The foil and sabre have rules of right of way and timing such that only one fencer can score at a time but in the épée that is not the case.

Individual contests in épée and foil are decided over three three-minute periods or until one fencer has scored 15 points. Sabre is so fast that there is a one-minute break when one fencer reaches eight hits. Team contests consist of nine three-minute bouts with 45 hits needed to win.

A referee oversees each bout, aided by a video referee, and in the latter stages by two further assistants who look for infringements. Hits are recorded electronically using wireless technology.

In the foil the valid target areas for hitting are the trunk of the body. In the sabre it is everything above the waist, barring hands, and in the épée it is the entire body.

Infringements include using the unarmed hand to cover the target, barging into your opponent, or foot faults whereby a fencer steps off the side or the end of the piste. Minor offences are penalised with a yellow card. Receiving two yellow cards in the same fight results in a penalty hit awarded against a fencer in the form of a red card. A black card results in exclusion.

All ten events are based on a head-to-head knockout format with a round of 64 for the individual men's foil and sabre and individual women's foil and épée. When there are less than 64 athletes participating in these events, byes are handed out. The individual men's épée and individual women's sabre begin with a round of 32 with a maximum of two athletes receiving byes.

Team events involve eight nations except those in which hosts Britain enter – the men's and women's foil – where there are nine. In the event of a tie in any of the events, athletes fence for a further minute.

The first to score is then declared the winner but if no-one does the athlete randomly assigned priority before the extra-time takes the tie.

All draws are based on the existing International Fencing Federation (FIE) rankings.

TEAM GB HERO: GILLIAN SHEEN

A dental surgeon from University College Hospital, London, Gillian Sheen won Britain's first-ever Olympic fencing gold medal at Melbourne 1956.

Sheen, who made her Olympic debut in Helsinki 1952 and also attended Rome 1960, defeated Olga Orban-Szabo of Romania in the individual foil final.

She continued to fence until 1963 before settling in America with her husband in dentistry.

In April he beat reigning world champion Andrea Cassara on his way to winning bronze at the Wakayama Grand Prix.

Kruse finished eighth on his Olympic debut at Athens 2004, the best performance by a British fencer for 40 years, and underlined his senior potential by winning European junior silver in 2001 and then gold a year later.

He took up the sport in 1994 when Ziemek Wojciechowski invited him to have a go. The former Poland international is still his coach to this very day. Kruse is a qualified civil engineer and can play the bagpipes.

● With just 18 places it is very different from other international tournaments, the options are limited, but it is the Olympic Games and every player in this squad should be very proud they have a chance to compete for a gold medal on home soil. ●

Football

Introduction

Football was included on the Olympic programme at Paris 1900 as a demonstration event and has featured at every Games since, with the exception of Los Angeles 1932. Those Games came just two years after the inaugural football World Cup and organisers in Los Angeles were keen to promote American football in the USA.

Football swiftly returned at Berlin 1936 however and the rise in professionalism in the sport around the world, and the fact professionals still could not compete at the Games, benefited Soviet Bloc countries who were state sponsored while retaining their amateur status.

Between 1948 and 1980, 23 of the 27 Olympic medals were won by Eastern European countries.

For Los Angeles 1984, the IOC permitted the participation of professional players for the first time with a compromise struck that allowed teams from Africa, Asia, Oceania, and CONCACAF to field their strongest professional sides, while restricting UEFA and CONMEBOL teams to players who had not featured at a World Cup.

At Barcelona 1992, a ruling, which still stands today, was introduced that states all men's teams must field players under 23 years of age, with the exception of three who can be over 23.

Upton Park FC won one match played at Paris 1900, although the IOC did not give out any medals at the time, they retrospectively awarded one many years later. Great Britain's men won gold at London 1908 and Stockholm 1912 and will take part for the first time in 52 years at London 2012, while the women's team will make their debut Olympic appearance.

Guided by Manchester City's Carlos Tevez and Barcelona's Lionel Messi, Argentina have won the last two men's tournaments while the USA have won three of the women's competitions – in Atlanta, Athens and Beijing – since the first in 1996.

Team GB 2012

In October 2011, the FA unveiled England under-21 coach Stuart Pearce as the men's team coach and current England women's head coach Hope Powell as the women's team coach.

Norman Creek was the manager the last time Great Britain competed at the Olympics at Rome 1960 – they tried but failed to qualify for the next three games – where they went out in the first round, losing to Brazil, drawing with Italy and beating the Republic of China, now known as Chinese Taipei.

Paddy Hasty, who played for Tooting & Mitcham United, Leyton Orient and Aldershot, is the last person to score for Great Britain at the Olympics prior to London 2012, netting the third in a 3-2 win over the Republic of China. The men's side for London 2012 features 13 English players and five Welsh – including captain Ryan Giggs, the most successful domestic player in English football history. He is one of the three over-age players – along with Micah Richards and Craig Bellamy – and one of two Manchester United players along with Tom Cleverley.

Chelsea defender Ryan Bertrand, who started the Champions League final in May, is included while goalkeeper Jack Butland is the only player selected who was part of the England squad at Euro 2012 in Poland and Ukraine. Swansea and Tottenham Hotspur are both represented by three players each while there are three players whose clubs are in the Championship – Butland (Birmingham City), Marvin Sordell (Bolton Wanderers) and Jason Steele (Middlesbrough).

The women's squad – the first of its kind to represent Great Britain at the Olympics – includes 33-year-old forward Kelly Smith, who has overcome her injury troubles to earn selection. Smith recently signed for her third spell with Arsenal Ladies, and is the all-time leading goalscorer for England with 45 goals from 111 caps.

Many of the women's squad have enjoyed recent domestic and international success. Ellen White, Rachel Yankey, Stephanie Houghton and Kim Little were all part of the Arsenal Ladies squad that won the inaugural 2011 FA Women's Super League. Rachel Williams, Karen Carney and Eniola Aluko all featured for Birmingham City Ladies as they won the FA Women's Cup for the first time in May this year.

Powell, who oversaw her 150th match as England's national coach against Slovenia in June, has named Casey Stoney as captain and four reserves; England internationals Jessica Clarke and Dunia Susi as well as Northern Ireland international Emma Higgins and Scotland international Jane Ross. The men's team have been drawn in Group A alongside Senegal, United Arab Emirates and Uruguay while the women's side is in Group E with New Zealand, Cameroon and Brazil.

Competition format

The men's competition consists of 288 players – 16 teams of 18 – with each team restricted to three players born before January 1, 1989. The 16 teams are split into four equal groups with three points awarded for a win, one for a draw and none for a defeat.

The women's competition consists of 12 teams of 18 players with no age restrictions applying. The 12 teams are split into three groups with the top two advancing from each, along with the two best third-placed teams. In the men's competition, the top two teams from the four groups progress to the quarter-finals.

Each team plays each other once in their group and if two teams are level at the end of this stage, goal difference, then number of goals scored is used to determine who advances. The quarter-final stage of the competition follows a knock-out format, meaning if the scores are level after 90 minutes, extra-time and penalties ensue. The winners of the semi-finals advance to the gold-medal match while the losers contest the bronze -medal match.

Both gold-medal matches will be played at Wembley Stadium, as will one of the semi-finals in both the women's and men's competitions.

TEAM GB HERO: ARTHUR BERRY

Arthur Berry was noted as the most brilliant amateur footballer in his day, helping Great Britain to Olympic gold at 1908 and 1912. In 1908 he scored in the 12-1 quarter-final win over Sweden while four years later he found the net in a 4-2 victory over Denmark in the gold medal match. Born in Liverpool 1888, Berry studied at Oxford University and won two Blues in 1907 and 1908 while he also enjoyed spells with Liverpool, Fulham, Everton, Wrexham, Northern Nomads and Oxford City. He also picked up 27 caps for England's amateur team before hanging up his boots to become a barrister. He later served as chairman and director at Liverpool before his death in 1953.

Gymnastics

Introduction

Gymnastics is split into three disciplines at the Olympics – artistic, rhythmic and trampoline – and is one of five sports to feature at every edition of the modern Games since Athens 1896.

Artistic gymnastics features a men's all-around competition, a women's all-around competition, two team events and ten different individual events – six male and four female – and at London 2012 they will be held at the North Greenwich Arena.

Rhythmic gymnastics is one of just two women-only disciplines at the Games – synchronised swimming the other – and is split up into individual all-around and group all-around events with Wembley Arena acting as the venue. The group all-around features balls, ribbons and hoops while the individual all-around also includes clubs.

Trampolining will also take place at North

Great Britain's Louis Smith competes in the individual men's pommel horse in Beijing

Artistic gymnastics will see 196 athletes compete – 98 men and 98 women – with each nation limited to five participants per gender.

At the Paris 1900 Games, there was just one gymnastics gold medal available – the individual all-around – which at the time consisted of 16 exercises, including weightlifting, pole vault and rope climbing.

Women competed in artistic gymnastics for the first time at the Amsterdam 1928 Games but it was not until Helsinki 1952 that individual events were added to the programme.

At Montreal 1976, 14-year-old Nadia Comaneci of Romania became the first gymnast in Olympic history to achieve a perfect score of 10 for her gold medal-winning performance on the uneven bars.

Rhythmic gymnastics was introduced to the Olympic schedule at Los Angeles 1984 with an individual all-around competition; a group discipline was added at Atlanta 1996.

The Soviet Union remain top of the overall medal table in artistic gymnastics but Japan are rapidly closing the gap while China won all but one of the men's events at Beijing 2008 and nine golds in total.

Russia have won six of the 11 Olympic rhythmic gymnastics gold medals and they also top the overall trampolining medal table with two.

There will be 32 trampolining participants at London 2012, 16 men and 16 women while a total of 96 women will compete in the rhythmic format. Great Britain have won four medals in Olympic gymnastics, all of which have come in the artistic format, and include one silver and three bronze.

Walter Tysal was Britain's first Olympic medallist, taking all around silver at London 1908, and was Great Britain's only individual medallist for 100 years until Louis Smith won pommel horse bronze at Beijing 2008.

DID YOU KNOW?
The word gymnastics comes from the Greek adjective gymnos, meaning naked. Early gymnasts used to perform without wearing clothes

From Beijing to here has been a long journey. After 2008 I wasn't even sure I would carry on, but the huge support for London and the enthusiasm of the public has really motivated me and inspired me to carry on training hard.

Beth Tweddle

In between, Great Britain's men's team won team bronze at Stockholm 1912 while Britain's women's team secured bronze at Amsterdam 1928.

Team GB 2012

For the first time ever Team GB will compete across all three Olympic gymnastic disciplines – artistic, rhythmic and trampoline. The women's artistic team will include three-time world champion Beth Tweddle, Britain's most successful gymnast ever, who competes at her third Games.

The 27-year old will add experience to a women's artistic team that includes 15-year old Rebecca Tunney, the youngest athlete on the whole British team for London 2012, and fellow teenager Jennifer Pinches, 18. Completing the squad is Imogen Cairns, a three-time Commonwealth Games gold medallist, and former British champion Hannah Whelan.

Four years ago in Beijing they failed to make the final in the team event but a fifth place at last year's World Championships in Tokyo gives plenty of cause for optimism. Louis Smith leads the men's artistic team, looking to build on his Beijing performance, when he became the first British male gymnast to win an Olympic medal in 100 years with pommel horse bronze.

Joining Smith is 21-year old national all-around champion Dan Purvis, a European and world medallist in the current Olympic cycle, and experienced international competitor Kristian Thomas. Sam Oldham won gold at the the first-ever Youth Olympic Games in Singapore in 2010 and completes the team with fellow 19-year old Max Whitlock.

Whitlock won team silver as well as pommel horse silver and horizontal bar bronze at the 2010 Commonwealth Games in Delhi.

Former world number one Kat Driscoll, who finished eighth at last year's World Championships, will compete in the women's trampoline, although there is no synchro event at the Games, in which she and close friend Amanda Parker are ranked number one in the world.

Great Britain's Francesca Fox performs with the ribbon

Six-time national champion Frankie Jones will compete in the individual rhythmic events including with the hoop, in which she won Commonwealth Games silver in Delhi. Great Britain's first ever Olympic rhythmic group has an average age of just 19 and is captained by Rachel Smith.

Competition format

In artistic gymnastics, competitors vie for all-around team and all-around individual gold, as well as on each individual apparatus.

The men compete in the floor, pommel horse, rings, vault, parallel bars and horizontal bar apparatus while the women compete in the vault, uneven bars, balance beam and floor.

The men's and women's competitions have four phases: qualification, team final, individual all-around final and individual apparatus finals. All gymnasts compete in the qualifications. The best eight teams then go through to the team final, where each apparatus is contested by three members of each five-strong team. Teams are ranked on their total score.

The best 24 individual gymnasts, with a maximum two per country, from the qualifying event perform exercises on each apparatus. The gymnast with the highest total score is the winner of the all-around final. The best eight gymnasts from the qualifying event on each apparatus, with a maximum two per country, go through to the individual apparatus finals.

DID YOU KNOW?

Soviet gymnast Larisa Latynina has 18 Olympic medals, the most ever won by a single athlete in any sport

Each apparatus is judged for difficulty, execution and artistry by a panel, with the highest scoring athlete the winner. The competition is presided over by a chair of the apparatus jury and eight judges. An athlete's final score is calculated by discarding the highest and lowest marks and an average is produced from the marks of the remaining six judges.

Rhythmic gymnastics is a combination of gymnastics and dance. Individual competitors perform short routines to music using hand apparatus – a hoop, a ball, clubs and a ribbon. Groups perform two routines, one with five balls and the other with three ribbons and two hoops. Scores are awarded in three categories: difficulty, artistry and execution. During the routines the apparatus must be in constant motion, with a variety of moves performed.

The individual all-around competition begins with a qualification round where each athlete performs with each apparatus, and the top ten athletes advance to the final for one more routine with each apparatus. The gymnast with the highest total score in the final wins the event. In the group competition qualification round, each group performs one routine with five balls and one routine using three ribbons and two hoops.

The scores for these routines are added together. The top eight groups then progress to the final, where they complete each routine again with the group with the best combined score from the final only winning gold.

The men's and women's trampolining competition begin with a qualification stage, during which athletes perform two routines. The first has specific requirements focusing on simplicity and execution with ten elements, two of which count for difficulty, while the second, again with ten elements, has no limitations.

The eight athletes with the best scores advance to the final for one more routine of ten different skills, which determines the results of the competition. Each routine is assigned an element of difficulty between one and ten depending on the number of elements involved with ten being the

The athletes are eventually awarded one difficulty score and five scores for execution. A final mark for execution is calculated by deducting the highest and lowest scores and adding the remaining scores, the total of which is added to the difficulty factor to produce the final score.

Since 2010 the time of flight of each routine has also been recorded and this is added to the overall score benefitting athletes who can maintain greater height during their routines.

Handball

Handball

Ewa Palies of Great Britain shoots at goal against Russia in a Euro 2012 qualifier

Introduction

Handball was first introduced at the 1936 Berlin Olympics when the hosts Germany went unbeaten throughout the tournament to win gold.

However, the sport didn't return to the Olympic programme until Munich hosted the Games in 1972, with women making their first appearance four years later in Montreal.

Eastern Europe remains home to the sport's male powerhouses – France became the first Western European country to win gold since 1936 when they beat Iceland in the final at Beijing 2008.

The sport is also strong in Scandinavia, where it has its roots, with Denmark's women winning three consecutive golds between 1996 and 2004 and Norway's women arriving in London as the defending champions.

Fast and physical, handball ranks behind only football as the continent's most popular ball game when using the barometer of television rankings.

Handball at London 2012 will be staged in the 7,000 capacity Copper Box, but the knock-out stages of the men's competition and semi-final stages onwards in the women's event will transfer across the Olympic Park to the larger capacity Basketball Arena.

Handball is played on a 40m long and 20m wide court between two teams of seven players, including a goalkeeper.

● Everybody in the squad has worked unbelievably hard to get us to this point and will continue to do so to ensure we give our best possible performance in London. ●●

Goals are frequently scored and it's not uncommon for more than 50 to be recorded in a match. A match consists of two 30-minute halves and players can move the ball with any part of their body above the knee, while goalkeepers can use any part of their body to defend their net.

After receiving the ball, outfield players can take up to three steps without dribbling. If players dribble, they may take an additional three steps. Players that stop dribbling have three seconds to pass or shoot and may take three additional steps during this time.

No players other than the defending goalkeeper are allowed within six metres of the goal but players may jump into this area when attempting a shot although they must release the ball before landing.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will enter handball teams at London 2012 for the first time in Olympic history after taking advantage of host nation allocations.

The British Handball Association launched its performance programme in 2006 but after a reduction in funding in 2008, Great Britain's base in Aarhus, Denmark was abandoned. The majority of male and female players were soon positioned at clubs across Europe to gain experience.

The men's team, captained by goalkeeper Bobby White, have secured some notable achievements in the build-up to the Games, with a first-ever competitive win in June 2010 against Bulgaria. Great Britain secured the historic 33-32 win at Crystal Palace in a Euro 2012 qualifying match. Since then they have also claimed the scalp of Italy and only narrowly missed out on a victory over South Korea in London in April.

The men's first group fixture of London 2012 is against reigning Olympic champions France, before they face Sweden, Argentina, Tunisia and Beijing silver medallists Iceland.

The GB women's team, skippered by Lynn McCafferty, have also recorded a number of high-profile victories in the build up to the Games, including a win over African

DID YOU KNOW?

Olympic gold medallist Hakeem Olajuwon played handball before turning his attentions to basketball champions Angola at last year's test event, although they were to finish sixth out of six.

The squad members, many of whom have made great personal sacrifices to relocate to a central training base at Crystal Palace, will face Montenegro, Russia, Croatia, Brazil and Angola in the group stage of the Olympic tournament.

Nicholas Satchwell is the men's reserve while Laura Innes is reserve for the women.

Competition format

There will be 12 men's and 12 women's teams at London 2012, with each squad 14-strong with seven in the starting line-up and seven on the bench during matches.

The winners – both men and women – of the most recent World Championships, European Championships, African Championships, Pan-American Games and a special Asian qualification tournament booked their places. Great Britain qualified automatically as hosts and six nations – both men and women – booked their slots during Olympic qualification tournaments, held in April and May.

Teams were divided into two pools of six during a draw at the Crystal Palace National Sports Centre in May, meaning every team will play five preliminary matches. The top four in each group will then advance to the knockout stages.

Preliminary matches can end up tied but knockout matches, if tied, are decided by two five-minute periods of extra-time. In the event scores remain level, a penalty shoot-out is held with five shots per team. If the score remains tied afterwards the match will go to sudden death penalties. Penalties are taken from seven metres in front of the goal.

● We have an amazing group of guys who have put themselves through so much pain in search of a dream we all share. We will be giving our all to achieve this dream while providing a lot of excitement at the same time. ●

Team GB Men's Hockey Captain
Barry Middleton

DID YOU KNOW?

The term hockey derives from the French word 'hocquet', which means shepherd's crook

Hockey

Introduction

One of six specific team sports at London 2012, hockey has been on the Olympic programme since the capital first held the Games in 1908, with the exceptions of Stockholm 1912 and Paris 1924.

Men have played at every one of those Games while women first featured at Moscow 1980 with London set to be their ninth straight appearance on the programme.

Artificial turf, as opposed to grass, was used for the first time at an Olympics at Montreal 1976 while the pitches at London 2012 are synthetic, water-based and blue with a pink trim.

The colour combination, a change from the traditional green, is an Olympic first while a yellow ball will be used to make the sport easier to watch both in person and on television.

Both the men's and women's competitions consist of 12 teams of 16 players – broken down into 11 players and five substitutes during matches – with nations limited to just one team entry per gender.

India are the most successful men's team at the Olympics with eight gold medals while of the eight women's tournaments so far, Australia have been crowned champions three times.

Team GB 2012

The British women's team was the first to be announced in May shortly after their victory at the Olympic test event at the Riverbank Arena with the men's team announced in June.

Kate Walsh will captain the women's team and joins Helen Richardson in making her third Olympic appearance after both appeared at Sydney 2000 and Beijing 2008.

Great Britain's women finished sixth four years ago but there has since been plenty of international success for the home nations.

England claimed bronze at the World Cup, Commonwealth Games and Champions Trophy in 2010 while at the Europeans in 2009 and 2011 they took the same colour.

Scotland meanwhile won Champions Challenge bronze and European Championship II gold in 2011 with Great Britain taking silver at this year's Champions Trophy.

The British women will face Japan, South Korea, Belgium, China and World Cup runners-up the Netherlands in the group stages. Meanwhile Barry Middleton will

GOLDEN GOAL:

If extra time is required during the knockout stages of the competition, the team that scores the first goal – the golden goal – wins the match

GREEN CARD:

An official warning that results in an automatic two-minute suspension. The umpire may also issue yellow cards which result in at least a five-minute suspension and red cards for complete removal from the game

PENALTY CORNER:

Awarded for a variety of different infringements, usually within the shooting circle. They are taken from the back line, 10m either side of the nearest goalpost. Only five defenders are allowed to defend them. Also known as short corners captain the men's team and make his third appearance at an Olympic Games alongside Ben Hawes and Rob Moore.

Great Britain's men finished fifth at Beijing 2008 with the team for London 2012 containing 12 members of the England team that won European gold for the first time ever in 2009.

England had to settle for European bronze in 2011, a year after winning Champions Trophy silver, with seven players set to make their Olympic debut in London.

The men's squad have been drawn against Australia and Spain – bronze and silver medallists respectively from Beijing 2008 – as well as Pakistan, Argentina and South Africa in the group stages.

Britain last won an Olympic hockey medal at Barcelona 1992, courtesy of the women's team, while the last gold was four years previous at Seoul 1988 thanks to the men.

Natalie Seymour and Abi Walker will act as reserves for the women's team and Richard Mantell and George Pinner for the men.

Competition format

Hockey matches consist of two 35-minute halves with teams made up of one goalkeeper, defenders, midfielders and attackers totalling 11 players – unlimited rolling substitutions are allowed at virtually any point.

To take a shot on goal players must be inside their opponents' shooting circle. The London Olympics will start with a preliminary phase with the 12 teams, both men and women, divided into two pools of six. Each team plays every other team in their pool with three points on offer for a win and one for draw – the top two from each group qualify for the semi-finals.

The winners of the semi-finals contest the gold-medal match, the losers the bronze-medal game while the remaining teams play each other to determine final placings.

If the scores of the knockout matches are tied after 70 minutes, a maximum of two seven-and-a-half minute extra time periods take place with the first 'golden goal' scored settling the contest.

At London 2012 if the scores remain level after extra time the match goes to a shoot-out competition, which sees the attacker start on the 23m-line with the ball and have eight seconds to dribble towards the goal and score. If the scores are still tied after five efforts the shootout becomes sudden death.

Two umpires, one in each half, control the match and look for infringements. For certain fouls, usually in the shooting circle, a penalty corner is awarded, while a penalty stroke can also be awarded.

● We have chosen what we feel is the best combination of players for the challenges of the Olympic Games. Each and every one of the 28 athletes in the training group has committed so much and as a result we have the most powerful squad spirit I have ever known. ●

Team GB Women's Hockey Head Coach Danny Kerry

TEAM GB HERO: SEAN KERLY +

Sean Kerly netted eight goals as Britain's men won Olympic gold in 1988 – four years after scoring seven to help the team to bronze in Los Angeles. Kerly quit his job in marketing in the run up to the Seoul Games, scoring a hat-trick in the semi-final win over Australia. He also netted in the gold-medal match against Germany, in a match made famous by TV commentator Barry Davies' cry of 'where oh where were the Germans?' after Imran Sherwani scored in the 3-1 win. He was to become the most recognisable hockey player in Britain at the time, nominated for the BBC Sports Personality of the Year Award in 1988 and awarded an MBE in 1992. He will be a summariser for the BBC at London 2012 alongside Davies.

Judo

Introduction

Judo, translated from Japanese, means 'gentle way' and first appeared on the Olympic schedule at Tokyo 1964 and, while it was removed in Mexico City four years later, it returned in Munich 1972 to become a regular fixture ever since.

Women's judo made its first appearance at Barcelona 1992 after it was trialled as a demonstration sport in Seoul 1988.

Along with taekwondo, judo is one of two martial arts at the Olympics and is derived from jujitsu, the hand-to-hand combat technique used by ancient Samurai warriors. It was established as a modern sport in 1882 in Japan by Professor Jigoro Kano.

Japan have been the dominant force in Olympic judo, winning 35 gold medals – three times more than any other nation – 15 silvers and 15 bronzes since Tokyo 1964. At Beijing 2008 they won seven medals, of which four were gold, to top the medal table.

At the inaugural judo competition at Tokyo 1964 however, Anton Geesink of the Netherlands sprang one of the biggest surprises in Olympic history to defeat Akio Kaminaga and prevent a Japanese clean sweep.

Great Britain have won seven silver medals and nine bronzes since Tokyo 1964 but have never managed to win gold and have not won a medal since Kate Howey's silver at Sydney 2000.

Great Britain will fulfil the maximum allocation at London 2012 with 14 judo players – seven men and seven women – selected in June.

She is one of five from the 14 selected to have previous Olympic experience and is one of four surviving members from the Beijing 2008 team, along with Euan Burton, Winston Gordon and Sarah Clark.

Burton, along with Craig Fallon, produced Britain's best finish in China, finishing seventh in the -81kg category, while Gordon and Clark will appear at their third successive Olympics.

Sophie Cox returns having taken an extended break from the sport after competing at Athens 2004, and at 21, Kelly Edwards is the youngest member of the team.

Sally Conway will compete in the -70kg category having won test event silver last year while the Royal Marines are Being selected to Team GB for the London Olympic Games is a fantastic honour. As a judoka it is the chance to make British sporting history and become our first judo Olympic champion. represented by Christopher Sherrington. James Austin is one of five Edinburgh-based judo players selected while several, including Gemma Howell and Gemma Gibbons, train at the British Judo Performance Institute in Dartford.

Daniel Williams, who finished seventh on his European Championship debut in 2010, Colin Oates, who placed fifth at last year's World Championships, and Ashley McKenzie, who won his first World Cup title in 2011, complete the team.

Competition format

Fighters compete in events determined by their weight, and at London 2012 there will be seven weight classes for men and seven for women, with 386 judokas taking part.

● We start on July 28 and will approach it as our job, making sure we've done everything possible to perform to our best and then respect the other sports as part of the fantastic Team GB. ●

The referee's command to end a contest

The tournament will follow a knock-out format. The winners of each contest will qualify for the next round, with the two finalists going head-to-head in the gold medal contest.

The defeated quarter-finalists will compete in two 'repechage' contests, the winners of which will then go up against the two defeated semi-finalists to determine the winners of the two bronze medals in each event.

Fights take place on a mat eight square metres in size, known as a tatami. Contests last five minutes and, if a judoka manages to throw their opponent onto his or her back; trap an opponent in an armhold or stranglehold that forces them to submit, or immobilises/pins an opponent on the floor for 25 seconds, they score ippon and immediately win the bout.

Smaller scores are awarded for other kinds of throws and holds such as a waza-ari or a yuko.

A waza-ari is awarded when the referee and judges consider that one element of the ippon is missing from a throw, for instance, when an opponent does not fall on his or her back or the thrower has not demonstrated enough force.

A waza-ari is also awarded when an opponent is held down for more than 20 seconds but less than 25.

A yuko is awarded when two elements of a throw are missing, for example, if the opponent falls on his or her side or if an opponent is able to escape from a hold between 15 and 20 seconds.

If the scores are tied after five minutes, the contest enters a golden score period, when the first score of any sort wins.

Athletes are also given penalties in the form of a hansoku-make or a shido. A hansoku-make is of equivalent value to an ippon and leads to immediate disqualification. Shidos are cumulative and four equal a hansoku-make.

At the start of each contest, the athletes stand four metres apart, facing each other on the tatami. The referee gets the contest underway by shouting hajime and stops it by shouting matte.

Modern Pentathlon

● The fact that we have four athletes who have demonstrated world-class performance over the last year by winning medals and achieving top-ten finishes at major international events means we're going to the Games with a very strong team, both in the men's and women's competition. ●

Modern Pentathlon

Introduction

Modern pentathlon – which celebrates its centenary as part of the Olympic movement at London 2012 – features athletes competing in five sports during a day-long competition and was invented by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, the founder of the modern Games.

The name derives from the Greek 'penta' – meaning five – and 'athlon' – meaning contest – and the current format of the sport has its origins in a 19th-century legend.

The story goes that a young French cavalry officer was sent on horseback to deliver a message. To complete his mission, he had to ride, fence, shoot, swim and run. Originally the sport was staged over five days but as of Atlanta 1996, a one-day format was introduced, while running and shooting were combined into a single event after Beijing 2008.

Great Britain have a strong tradition in the sport, especially in recent years, and their athletes have consistently won medals at World Cup, European and World Championship level.

Jim Fox, Danny Nightingale and Adrian Parker won men's Olympic team gold in 1976 and Richard Phelps, Dominic Mahony and Graham Brookhouse won team bronze in 1988.

The men's team event was dropped after Barcelona 1992 but since the introduction of women's modern pentathlon in 2000, Team GB athletes have climbed the podium at every opportunity.

Steph Cook won the first ever women's title in Sydney while team-mate Kate Allenby claimed bronze.

Four years later in Athens, Georgina Harland also claimed bronze, while Heather Fell was a silver medallist in Beijing.

Russia and Hungary are the traditional powerhouses of the sport and their athletes will be among those to watch in London but Great Britain's Mhairi Spence won the women's World Championship title in Rome just a few months before the Games.

● I find it hard to find words to describe how excited I am to be part of the British team for the London 2012 Olympic Games.

I've dreamt of competing at an Olympics since I was eight years old and I feel like it's so much more special because the Olympic Games will be in London. ●

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will have a full quota of modern pentathletes in London after Mhairi Spence, Samantha Murray, Nick Woodbridge and Sam Weale were officially announced as part of Team GB at the Old Royal Naval College in Greenwich in June.

On the women's side Spence and Murray will both be making their Olympic debuts in London. In total five British women achieved the London 2012 Olympic qualifying standard with Spence and Murray edging out Heather Fell, who won silver at Beijing 2008, Freya Prentice, who obtained a qualifying standard after finishing eighth at the European Championships in 2011, and Katy Burke.

Spence and Murray will be bidding to continue the fine record that British women have set since they first competed at Sydney 2000. Spence is the reigning world champion and Murray the bronze medallist from the same event in Rome in May.

Meanwhile, on the men's side Woodbridge and Weale's selection mean Great Britain are unchanged from the previous Olympics in Beijing in 2008 and, like the women, they also overcame stiff competition to qualify for the Games. Jamie Cooke, the world junior champion who achieved a qualifying standard after finishing fourth at last year's Europeans, was their closest challenger with Woodbridge and Weale looking to better their finishes of 25th and tenth respectively to secure Britain's first men's modern pentathlon medal since 1988.

Competition format

Modern pentathlon has been through many rule changes since making its Olympic debut 100 years ago in Stockholm, including several since Beijing 2008. London 2012 will be the first Games to feature the combined event and also laser pistols. Both innovations have helped to create an exciting and spectator-friendly finish to the day.

Each country is limited to two athletes per gender and the maximum field size for the men's and women's competition is 36 athletes.

The five events take place over one day with all athletes fencing each other in bouts that conclude after one minute. If neither fencer scores a hit within that time, both record a defeat. The weapon used is an épée.

An athlete scores 1000 points for winning 70 per cent of their bouts and each win above or below that mark scores +/- 24 points.

The next event is a 200m freestyle swim in which athletes are seeded in heats according to their personal best times. Points are awarded depending on the time achieved. A time of 2:30minutes scores 1000 points. Each 0.33 seconds above or below this time scores +/- four points. Unlike Olympic equestrian events, where riders bring their own horse to the Games,

The athletes have just 20 minutes in the warm-up arena over five practice jumps to get to know their horse. They then must jump 12 show jumping obstacles with points awarded depending on time and faults.

Athletes start with 1,200 points. They lose 20 points for each jump they knock down, 40 points for a refusal or disobedience, and 60 points for a fall. They lose four points for each second they are over the allotted time.

After the conclusion of three events, athletes begin the running and shooting combined event in a staggered start. The leading competitor is first to start with a one-second head start for every four points they are ahead.

They will cover a 3000m cross country running course and stop three times to shoot at an electronic target five times with laser pistols as quickly as they can. The staggered start means that the first athlete to cross the finish line is the winner.

TEAM GB HERO: STEPH COOK

Steph Cook won gold in the first ever women's modern pentathlon event at Sydney 2000, finishing just ahead of team-mate Kate Allenby who claimed bronze.

A former club level rower and athlete, Cook took up modern pentathlon while studying at the University of Cambridge and put her medical career on hold to focus on becoming an Olympian.

After winning gold in Sydney, she added the world title to her CV in 2001 and retired from the sport shortly afterwards, aged 29.

Rowing

● We go to the start in London ready to defend our status as the leading rowing nation from Beijing but we are under no illusion as to how tough winning medals, especially gold medals, will be at this Games. ●

Team GB Rowing Team Leader David Tanner

Introduction

The rowing competition will take place at Eton Dorney where 14 medal events will be contested by 550 athletes – 353 men and 197 women – while each nation is restricted to a maximum of 28 male athletes and 20 female athletes.

Rowing has been an Olympic sport since 1900, although it was due to take place at Athens 1896 only for bad weather to render the course, which was on the sea, unsuitable for competition.

Women's rowing was introduced at Montreal 1976. At Barcelona 1992, the Olympic course was standardised at 2000m – prior to that women raced over 1000m.

Of the 14 events, eight are contested by men and six by women, and two types of rowing – sweeping, which uses one oar per rower, and sculling, which uses two – will feature.

Great Britain have won 54 Olympic medals in rowing, 24 of which have been gold, and are the third most successful country at the Games. It is also the only sport in which Great Britain have won an Olympic gold medal at every Games since 1984.

Sir Steve Redgrave won five consecutive gold medals between Los Angeles 1984 and Sydney 2000 to become Great Britain's most successful Olympian of all time. Sir Matthew Pinsent, who won gold medals with Redgrave in 1992, 1996 and 2000, also won gold at Athens 2004.

Silver medals were claimed in the women's quadruple scull, which saw Katherine Grainger finish second for a third straight Games, and the men's eight. Both the men's and women's double scull boats took bronze.

events. Katherine Grainger and Anna Watkins will contest the women's double scull and are unbeaten since teaming up together in 2010, while Helen Glover and Heather Stanning, world silver medallists in the women's pair, won all three World Cup regattas this year.

Grainger, with three consecutive Olympic silver medals to her name, is Great Britain's most successful ever female rower and she will be well fancied to finally land gold alongside Watkins, who won bronze with Elise Laverick at Beijing 2008.

Debbie Flood, who has also won two consecutive Olympic silver medals alongside Grainger, returns for a third attempt in the women's quadruple scull, while Alan Campbell, a world silver and two-time bronze medallist, takes part in the men's single scull for the third consecutive Games.

Great Britain won men's four gold at the World Championships in Bled in 2011 and since then Andrew Triggs Hodge and Pete Reed have returned to the boat in which they won Olympic gold in 2008, joining fellow Beijing champion Tom James and Alex Gregory. Matthew Langridge and Ric Egington have moved from the four to the eight. The London 2012 quartet won silver at the Munich World Cup in June.

Great Britain's other gold medallists from Beijing 2008, Zac Purchase and Mark Hunter, also won world gold in 2011 but they finished sixth in Munich while the women's eight won world bronze in Bled and the men's eight, featuring Barcelona 1992 gold medallist Greg Searle, took silver last September.

Marcus Bateman and Cameron Nichol have been named as the openweight spares and Adam Freeman-Pask as the lightweight. Emily Taylor and Jo Cook are the women's spares. Paul Stannard will act as coach to the spares.

Competition format

All races are conducted in six lanes, separated by buoys, over a straight 2000m course.

The men's events are: the single scull, double scull, lightweight double scull, quadruple scull, pair, four, lightweight four and eight. For the women the events are: the single scull, double scull, lightweight double scull, quadruple scull, pair and eight. Both the men's and women's eights also feature a cox.

The format of the competition depends on how many boats are competing. All events include a repechage – a series of further races to qualify boats for semi-finals or finals, and to rank all boats in order of performance.

Events with 12 or fewer boats start with two heats. The best boat from heat one and the best boat from heat two qualify for final A, which determines places one to six, including the medals.

Unsuccessful boats from the heats compete in the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for final A. Unsuccessful boats from the repechage go forward to final B, which determines places seven to 12.

Events with 13 to 18 boats begin with three heats, from which the best boats qualify directly for semi-finals A and B. All other boats progress to the repechage round, which offers a second chance to qualify for the semi-finals.

The best three boats in semi-finals A and B qualify for final A, which determines places one to six, including the medals. Unsuccessful boats from semi-finals A and B go forward to final B, which determines places seven to 12. Unsuccessful boats from the repechage go forward to final C, which determines places 13 to 18.

Events with 19 to 24 boats follow the same format however unsuccessful boats from the repechage go to semi-finals C and D; from here, they go either to final C, places 13 to 18, or final D, places 19 to 24. If there are more than 24 boats in an event, the four best boats from each heat go through to the quarter-finals, with the other boats competing in a repechage to fill the remaining quarter-final places.

The best three boats from each quarter-final progress to the semis, with the top three from each advancing to final A. The other boats compete in finals B, C, D and E, which rank boats from seven downwards. Events with 25 or more boats follow the same format with a final F, if necessary.

TEAM GB HERO: SIR STEVE REDGRAVE +

Great Britain's most successful Olympian of all time, Sir Steve Redgrave won five consecutive gold medals between Los Angeles 1984 and Sydney 2000. At Los Angeles 1984 he won gold in the coxed four and at Seoul 1988 he won gold in the pair and bronze in the coxed pair. Four years later at Barcelona 1992, and at Atlanta 1996, he won gold in the pair, both times alongside Sir Matthew Pinsent while at Sydney 2000 he, Pinsent, James Cracknell and Tim Foster won gold in the four. He also has nine World Championship gold medals to his name and has twice carried the British flag at the Olympic Games opening ceremony.

There are members of Britain's rowing team that were not born when Greg Searle MBE made his debut on the British rowing team, finishing fourth at the World Junior Championships in 1988.

Searle won world junior gold in 1989 and 1990 and it is 20 years since he won coxed pair Olympic gold with brother Jonny and cox Garry Herbert at Barcelona 1992, rowing down Italy's Abbagnale brothers, two-time Olympic champions, in a thrilling finish.

Searle went on to win bronze four years later in the four at Atlanta 1996 but quit the sport in 2001 with five World Championship medals also on his CV.

He continued in top level sport as a grinder on Britain's America's Cup sailing team before the lure of a home Olympics tempted him back into rowing in 2009.

A father of two – Josie and Adam – Searle has worn the same socks in every major race since 1992.

Introduction

Weymouth Bay and Portland Harbour will be the venue for the Olympic sailing competition. It was the first London 2012 Games venue to be finished.

Team GB have topped the Olympic sailing medal table at the last three Games and won six medals in Beijing, including four golds. Ten medals will be available at London 2012, where each nation can enter one boat per event.

Team GB, whose target is four medals at London 2012, have automatic entry to all events as the host nation and have named a full squad of 16 sailors, including nine men and seven women.

Team GB 2012

Ben Ainslie will look to make history in Weymouth as he bids to claim a fourth consecutive Olympic gold medal.

After winning silver in his first Games

● We've got ten teams in ten events and as we go into the Games I can honestly say we've got potential to medal in every single event. We've never had that before. ●

Team GB Sailing Team Leader

at Atlanta 1996, aged 19, Ainslie has dominated first the Laser, winning gold at Sydney 2000, and then the Finn class, where he has claimed golds at Athens 2004 and Beijing 2008.

His Beijing win saw him installed as Britain's most successful Olympic sailor ever, overhauling Rodney Pattison, who had an identical record to Ainslie up until Beijing. If the 35-year-old were to take gold it would be Team GB's fourth straight Olympic title in the Finn class, a run that stretches back to Iain Percy's win at Sydney 2000. This would install him as the greatest Olympic sailor in history, overcoming Denmark's Paul Elvstrom's record of four golds at consecutive Games.

As well as Ainslie, there are three more reigning Olympic champions on the British team. Paul Goodison took Laser gold in Qingdao four years ago but will face a battle with Australia's Tom Slingsby who has taken five of the last six World Championship titles on offer. Andrew Simpson and Percy won Star gold in Beijing and will be looking to bounce back from settling for silver at May's World Championships.

Sisters Kate and Lucy Macgregor will be challenging for medals alongside Elliott 6.0m Match Racing teammate Annie Lush while in the women's 470 Hannah Mills and Saskia Clark will go for gold.

● This qualification process was definitely the hardest compared to the previous four I have been through. We all want to compete on home waters, it is a once in a lifetime opportunity, and having four top British sailors battling for qualification in the Finn meant I had to be at my best for every race. ●

TACKING:

HIKING OUT:

LUFFING:

Altering course towards the wind

DID YOU KNOW?

Sailing has been part of the Olympics since 1900 but was known as yachting until the 2000 Games in Sydney

With a pair of Olympic bronze medals to their name from Athens 2004 and Beijing 2008 respectively, Nick Dempsey and Bryony Shaw will contest the RS:X windsurfing class.

Competition format

In competitive sailing, athletes complete courses in as short a time as possible, harnessing the wind in their sails for maximum speed.

There are two racing formats – match racing (one against one) and fleet racing (mass start) – across ten classes. Crew sizes vary from one to three, with Laser, Laser Radial, Finn and RS-X classes featuring one sailor; the 470, 49er and Star two and the women's Elliott 6.0m, three.

In fleet racing, competitors contest ten races – 15 for the 49er – with points awarded depending on finishing positions in each race – one point for first, 41 for 41st. The ten boats with the lowest accumulated scores, once their worst score has been discarded, qualify for the medal race, where points scored are doubled and added to the initial scores to decide the top ten.

In match racing, the first boat across the line wins the match. Teams compete against each other in a series of round robin matches, with the top teams progressing to the final knockout stages.

Ben Ainslie, CBE, made sure of a fifth Olympic appearance by winning the Sail for Gold Regatta and the London 2012 test event last summer – both of which were held at the Weymouth venue.

Ainslie won his first Olympic medal at Atlanta 1996, when he became Britain's youngest ever sailing medallist, aged 19, by claiming silver in the Laser class.

At Sydney 2000 he won his first Olympic gold in the Laser and then moved to the Finn to claim gold at Athens 2004 and Beijing 2008, becoming Britain's most successful Olympic sailor in history.

Inspired by father Roddy, who took part in the first-ever Round the World Race, Ainslie took up sailing aged eight and is now a multiple world champion, winning the Laser class twice and the Finn on six occasions. In 2010 he also won the World Match Racing title.

He is the only sailor to be named ISAF World Sailor of the Year on three occasions, 1998, 2002 and 2008 while he is also a four-time British yachtsman of the year.

A Chelsea fan, 'Beano' Ainslie was the first official torch bearer for the UK Olympic Torch Relay, carrying the flame in Cornwall.

After winning world bronze in 2007, Saskia Clark and Christina Bassadone finished sixth at the Beijing Olympics in the 470 class.

Following Beijing 2008, Bassadone retired from the sport, leaving Clark to trial partnerships with Beijing 2008 Laser Radial representative Penny Clark, and 2008 Olympic Yngling champion teammates Pippa Wilson and Sarah Ayton.

In February 2011, Norwich City FC fan Clark, whose off-the-water partner is Paul Goodison, teamed up with Hannah Mills.

The pair duly won the London 2012 test event and came second at the ISAF World Championships in Perth in December last year before claiming world gold in Barcelona in May.

At Beijing 2008 however he just missed out on the podium, finishing fourth in the RS:X sailboard class in Qingdao. As a result, Dempsey opted to pursue a third Olympic appearance at London 2012 and in 2009 he won world gold in Weymouth, where he took silver in last year's test event.

In October 2008, soon after the Beijing Olympics, Dempsey married double Olympic Yngling gold medallist Sarah Ayton and they have two children together, Thomas and Oscar.

In 2009, Sheffield United FC fan Goodison was awarded an MBE after winning Olympic gold the previous year.

Goodison embarked on an unbeaten run after the Beijing Olympics, which was finally brought to an end at the 2009 Sail for Gold Regatta at the London 2012 venue in Weymouth.

Goodison prevailed in a battle for the sole British London 2012 spot with Nick Thompson, who won world silver in December last year in Perth.

Goodison's 2009 European title was his fifth in a row while victory at Beijing 2008 was his first Olympic medal, having finished fourth at Athens 2004, also in the Laser class.

Stevie Morrison has known 49er partner Ben Rhodes for 20 years, having competed against each other at cadet level.

The duo arrived at Beijing 2008 with a complete set of medals from three of the four World Championships since Athens 2004 and as favourites to reach the podium.

Highly disappointed with his ninth-place finish in Beijing, James Bond fan Morrison was sweating on Olympic selection for London 2012 after Rhodes had to pull out of the 2011 World Championships in Perth with a rib injury.

John Pink and Rick Peacock were among the front runners for selection but Morrison and Rhodes were selected for a second Olympic appearance in May.

Iain Percy won Finn gold at Sydney 2000 in his first appearance at the Olympics.

But at Beijing 2008, Percy won his second Olympic gold medal, this time with lifelong friend Andrew Simpson, in the Star class, after his previous partnership with Steve Mitchell disbanded.

Percy started sailing aged four and is one of just three British men, along with Ben Ainslie and Rodney Pattison to win multiple Olympic sailing gold medals.

Appointed Member of the British Empire in 2005 and then Order of the British Empire in the Queen's 2009 New Year Honours list, Percy stores his medals at his parents' house to keep them safe.

Percy and Simpson had hoped to challenge for the next America's Cup but they had to revert their attentions to the Olympic Star class after Team Origin owner Sir Keith Mills felt compelled to withdraw from the running in October 2010.

Initially starting in the Laser Andrew Simpson plugged away for many years behind Iain Percy and Ben Ainslie in the Finn.

But with Ainslie dominating, Simpson teamed up with Percy in 2007 in the Star class and the duo, lifelong best friends and former Lego-building partners, won World Championship bronze to suggest their fledgling partnership showed promise.

A year later Simpson and Percy won Olympic gold in the Star class at Beijing 2008 in a dramatic medal race in Qingdao and 'Bart' was awarded with an MBE. It was Percy's second Olympic gold medal, having topped the podium in the Finn class, before Ainslie's emergence, at Sydney 2000.

Simpson lists Ian Botham as his sporting hero and like his British teammate Paul Goodison, he played football as a youngster and is a big Tottenham Hotspur FC fan.

Shooting

Introduction

Shooting has featured at every Olympics aside from St Louis 1904 and Amsterdam 1928 and from three events at Athens 1896 it has grown to 15 – nine for the men and six for the women – for London 2012 with 390 athletes set to take part.

There are three different firearms in Olympic shooting – pistol, rifle and shotgun – each containing five events and all will be held at the Royal Artillery Barracks in Woolwich.

Men and women have only been competing in entirely separate events since 1996 – for 28 years between Mexico City 1968 and Atlanta 1996, they competed alongside each other.

Separate women's events were established in 1984 in Los Angeles but some events remained mixed until 1996.

Two women won medals in such mixed events – Margaret Murdock of the USA claimed silver in the rifle three positions at Montreal 1976 and China's Zhang Shan secured skeet gold at Barcelona 1992.

At the Paris Games in 1900, live pigeons were used as moving targets but were replaced with clay targets thereafter.

Ralf Schumann is among the most successful Olympic shooters winning three golds and two silvers with his pistol for East Germany and Germany between 1988 and 2008, while Wang Yifu of China finished his career in 2004 with six Olympic medals – two golds, three silvers and a bronze.

Marina Logvinenko from Russia won five women's pistol medals between 1988 and 1996 while American Kim Rhode claimed two gold medals – one of which she won aged 17 in 1996 – a bronze and a silver over four Games to 2008.

The last Briton to win an Olympic shooting gold medal was Richard Faulds, who took the double trap title at Sydney 2000, while Ian Peel won silver in the trap at the same Games.

Great Britain have won 43 medals in total, 12 of which have been gold. At Los Angeles 1984 Malcolm Cooper won the 50m rifle three positions and is the only man in Olympic history to successfully defend that title, doing so four years later in Seoul.

In 1924, Philip Neame was a member of the British team that won running deer double shot gold in Paris and as a result he is the only British Olympian to hold a gold medal and a Victoria Cross, having earned the latter for bravery during World War I.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain's shooting squad features 11 athletes with a blend of success on the world, European, Commonwealth and Olympic stage.

Richard Faulds returns for his fifth straight Olympic Games, having won double trap gold at Sydney 2000 while he will be joined in the same event by Peter Wilson.

Wilson set a new double trap world record of 198 hits from 200 in Arizona in March and reached the top of the world rankings in August 2011.

In the women's events, Elena Allen returns for her second Olympic appearance in the skeet discipline while Jennifer McIntosh, I'm delighted with the team we have and I really do believe we have some great opportunities for medals. We've got a nice blend of youth and experience in the team.

WORDS TO LEARN +

TRAP:
The device used for launching clay targets into the air

DOUBLE TRAP:
Shooting competition in which two clay targets are launched simultaneously in front of the shooter

THREE POSITIONS:

LOST:

Great Britain's Jonathan Hammond competing at the Beijing 2008 Olympics

● I am very excited about competing in London, and I still remember exactly where I was when I heard that London was to be the host city. I remember thinking 'maybe I won't retire just yet!' ● who won three medals at the 2010 Commonwealth Games, is the youngest member of the squad.

There is further experience in the shape of 31-year-old Jonathan Hammond, who is the current Commonwealth champion in both the 50m rifle individual and pairs events.

James Huckle, 21, and Rory Warlow, 22, will make their Olympic debuts at London 2012 in the rifle three positions and skeet events respectively after both began their Olympic quests with gold medals at the 2008 Commonwealth Youth Games in Pune, India.

Ed Ling and Richard Brickell both return to the Olympic fold, having featured at Athens 2004 before missing the Beijing 2008 Games.

Georgina Geikie is another Team GB debutant as she competes in the 25m pistol competition, ensuring Great Britain will have representatives in each of the three firearm competitions.

DID YOU KNOW?

Hungarian shooter Károly Takács was a world-class shooter when, in 1938, his right hand was injured by a grenade. After teaching himself to shoot left-handed, Takács won gold in 1948 and 1952

Beijing Olympian Charlotte Kerwood became the 11th and final member of the Team GB shooting team in June when the three-time Commonwealth Games gold medallist was selected in the trap event.

Competition format

Across the 15 shooting events, 390 athletes will take part with a maximum of 28 per nation, equating to two competitors per event with the exception of the women's trap and the women's skeet which has a maximum of one athlete per nation. Athletes shoot at stationary targets in a range in the rifle and pistol events, and at moving targets in the shotgun events.

All the events are individual and require shooters to adopt different positions: standing, kneeling or prone, where they lie on their fronts.

Rules vary according to the discipline, with distance, types of target, arm, firing position, number of shots – between 20 and 60 – and the time within which the shots have to be fired all relevant factors.

The rifle and pistol classes require shooters to fire bullets at a ten-ring target within a given time while the shotgun events – trap and skeet – see competitors firing lead pellets at clay targets, released on or after a command from the shooter.

There are two stages to an Olympic shooting event – the preliminary round and the final. The scores of the two rounds are added together and the highest score wins.

Varying numbers of athletes qualify from the preliminary round depending on which event it is.

The winner of the rifle and pistol events is the shooter with the highest score. During the qualification stages, the best shooters qualify and move to the final round where the ten rings of the target are subdivided into ten 'decimal' score zones (max 10.9). The final score is added to the qualification score to determine total scores and final rankings.

Shotgun shooters score points by hitting a clay target. A hit is declared by the referee when the target is shot and at least one visible piece is seen to fall from it. The shooter who hits the most targets wins.

Charlotte Kerwood will make her second Olympic appearance in London

TEAM GB HERO: MALCOLM COOPER

Malcolm Cooper won 50m rifle three positions gold at Los Angeles 1984 and successfully defended his title at Seoul 1988 – the only man in Olympic history to do so in his event.

Born in Camberley, Surrey, Cooper grew up in New Zealand where he learned to shoot while his father was stationed there with the Royal Navy.

In 1986 he was also world champion in 300m standard rifle, a non-Olympic discipline, one of many wins at global level while he also enjoyed plenty of European success. Cooper died in June 2001 after an eight-month battle with cancer.

Table Tennis

Introduction

Since table tennis made its Olympic debut at the 1988 Games in Seoul, the sport has been dominated by Chinese players, who have won 41 medals in 24 events, including 20 golds.

It is estimated there are 300 million regular players in China, although the surprise victory of the Singapore women's team at the 2010 World Championships proved that others are raising their game and are capable of challenging their dominance.

Such a performance will give hope to the likes of Germany's Timo Boll, the five-time European singles champion who won bronze at the 2011 World Championships.

However, it is 20 years since the last and every available medal in the individual competition. However, new rules mean they are restricted to just two players in the individual event.

At London 2012, the 12-day table tennis competition will be staged at ExCeL with athletes going for gold in men's and women's singles and a men's and women's team competition.

The actual origins of the sport remain unclear but some claim it began as parlour game in Victorian Britain, where it was known variously as 'whiff-whaff' and 'ping-pong' and played on dining tables.

Table tennis quickly grew in popularity, with several manufacturers producing and patenting equipment and devising official rules.

In 1902 the first unofficial World Championships were staged, with the International Table Tennis Federation formed in 1926.

Team GB 2012

Britain have never won an Olympic table tennis medal but as hosts qualified six athletes automatically; a team of three men, with Paul Drinkhall the only one competing in the singles, and a team of three women, with Joanna Parker the sole singles competitor.

Drinkhall, Liam Pitchford and Andrew Baggaley will fill the men's spots, meaning no place for Darius Knight, while Parker, Kelly Sibley and Na Liu are the women selected.

Drinkhall, Pitchford and Baggaley were all part of the England men's team that won silver at the 2010 Commonwealth Games – however that wasn't the only success the three tasted in Delhi.

● I was slightly disappointed not to qualify by right but since I got the wildcard I want to keep improving and prove I'm good enough to merit my place.

SHAKEHANDS:
Style of grip favoured by European players.

TIME-OUT:
During matches a player can call a one minute break at their own discretion

CHOP:
A defensive shot that carries a tremendous amount of backspin

PENHOLD:
Style of grip popular in Asia, whereby the racket is held as if holding a pen

Drinkhall, a three-time European junior champion and world junior silver and bronze medallist, won mixed doubles bronze with Parker while Pitchford and Baggaley took the same colour in the men's doubles.

Despite having never won an Olympic medal, Britain are making international progress with Pitchford beating four players inside the world's top 100 at the European Championships in 2011.

Sibley won ten matches in a row at the same event to help the England women's team earn a place in the Championship division. Born in China, Liu moved to Northern Ireland in 2001 and gained British citizenship in 2008. She was the first athlete from Northern Ireland to be selected onto Team GB.

Darius Knight and Naomi Owen have been named as Great Britain's reserves.

Competition format

Qualification for the individual competition was decided on a combination of the world rankings, published immediately after the 2011 World Championships, a series of regional qualifying competitions and final international qualification tournament in Doha in May.

After the conclusion of the World Championships, the top 28 women and men players qualified, although as only two per players per nation per gender are permitted – and China had five of the world's top six male players at the time – those further down the standings were given a place.

A further 40 places were allocated at regional qualifiers and two during the final world qualifier.

Men's singles and women's singles will follow a knockout format. The entries ranked one to 16 will qualify directly to the third round, the entries ranked 17 to 32 to the second round and the entries ranked 33 to the total number of participants will qualify to the first or preliminary rounds.

All matches are the best of seven games—a game is won by the first player to reach 11 points, or if the score is 10-10, two clear points. There are 16 spots available in the team competition and they were decided based on performances at the 2012 World Team Championships in Dortmund.

Great Britain were automatically assured qualification as host nation, as were the highest-ranked nation from each of the six continental federations. The remaining positions were filled based on finishing performances, with dominant Asian nations taking five of the nine available slots.

Each team match consists of five individual matches and the winner is the first to win three – two singles matches are followed by a doubles encounter and then one or two singles matches until a team reaches the winning mark. Three players compete in team matches and, if the match goes the distance, each must play twice.

The Olympic team competition is also a straight knockout with a first round, quarter-final, semi-final and final. In both individual and team events there will always be a play-off for the bronze medal between the two losing semi-finalists, this does not happen at World Championship level.

Taekwondo

Introduction

Taekwondo is one of two martial arts – along with judo – to be on the Olympic schedule for London 2012 and it will make a fourth successive appearance at the Games.

A demonstration sport at Seoul 1988 and Barcelona 1992, in 1994 the IOC accepted taekwondo as an Olympic sport to be contested for the first time at the Sydney Games in 2000.

Translating into English as ‘the way of foot and fist’, there are eight taekwondo events at London 2012 – flyweight, lightweight, middleweight and heavyweight categories for both men and women.

● No one can guarantee results but these guys will be ready to perform and there will have been no stone left unturned in the pursuit of excellence for these Olympic Games. ●

Team GB Taekwondo Team Leader
Gary Hall

Only a maximum of two male and two female athletes are allowed per country and, while there is a choice over which weight category to enter, each nation is only permitted one competitor per event. In total 64 men and 64 women will compete in London, 16 per weight category.

As the national sport of South Korea, they have dominated the past three Games, winning 12 medals in total, nine of which have been gold.

Great Britain meanwhile, won their first-ever medal at Beijing 2008 as Sarah Stevenson took women’s heavyweight bronze – she will get the chance to upgrade in London.

At the Olympics, competitors fight according to a code laid down by the World Taekwondo Federation – the international governing body for the sport, which was established in 1973. Olympic competitors practise the WTF style of taekwondo.

Team GB 2012

Beijing 2008 bronze medallist and two-time world champion Sarah Stevenson – Britain’s greatest ever player – returns for a fourth Olympic appearance alongside three Games debutants.

With each nation limited to a maximum of just two male and two female entrants across the eight disciplines, Stevenson (-67kg) is joined by Jade Jones (-57kg), Martin Stamper (-68kg) and Lutalo Muhammad (-80kg).

Stamper is an eight-time British champion and enjoyed a superb 2011 season, winning gold medals at the US, German and British Opens as well as World Championship bronze.

He finished 2011 with a record of 27 wins from 29 fights and was duly named as British Taekwondo’s Olympic Athlete of the Year.

Jones claimed her second European bronze medal in Manchester in May, while Muhammad was the last player to be confirmed onto Team GB.

He was one of three Brits to win gold at this year’s European Championships, securing victory in the -87kg category.

GAM-JEOM:

One point is earned for an attack to the trunk protector, two for a turning kick to the same area, three for a kick to the head and four for a turning kick to the head while punches to the head are deemed illegal.

A referee stays in the combat area while judges sit at each corner of the court. Judges award points for valid kicks and punches which are recorded electronically. Bouts are contested over three two-minute rounds.

The winner is the competitor with the highest score thereafter, however if they are level a sudden death fourth round is held to determine the winner.

At the Olympics an elimination format, for the 16 competitors per weight category, is used, producing a gold medal contest. Those who are defeated by the finalists at any stage enter the repechage.

The first repechage fights are between those who lost in the preliminary round and quarter-finals with the two winners meeting the two losing semi-finalists in a battle for two bronze medals.

Breaking the rules can lead to penalties including a warning for acts such as crossing the boundary line, hitting below the waist or using the knee to attack. Two warnings lead to a point being awarded to the opponent.

A deduction penalty of one point is given for attacking a fallen opponent or for deliberately punching the face. The contest is stopped if a competitor earns four penalty deduction points and the opponent is declared the winner.

Sarah Stevenson is the most successful taekwondo athlete in British history. She became Britain's first ever world champion in 2001 and won the nation's maiden taekwondo Olympic medal in 2008.

Stevenson had already competed at Sydney 2000, finishing fourth, and Athens 2004, ending 11th, before travelling to Beijing, where she almost didn't climb the podium at all.

She was initially eliminated during the quarter-finals after the referee failed to recognise clear points scored. The decision was overturned but she suffered an ankle injury in the semi-final and lost.

Stevenson battled on to win bronze and took her second senior world title in May 2011. She is also a four-time European champion and was awarded an MBE in the 2012 New Year Honours List.

Her participation in London was thrown into doubt after she suffered a serious cruciate ligament injury, which required surgery, at a training camp in Mexico in February.

Stevenson has also had to cope with the death of her father Roy to a brain tumour and the death of her mother Diana to cancer in 2011.

Jamie and Andy Murray in action at Beijing 2008

Introduction

The All England Lawn Tennis Club will play host to the tennis competitions at London 2012, just three weeks after the third Grand Slam on the sport's annual calendar.

Tennis featured at every edition of the modern Olympics up until 1924 – after which it was removed from the Games' calendar amid arguments over players' amateur status.

Tennis returned to the Games 64 years later and there will be 172 entrants – 86 men and 86 women – in London while the All England Club have waived their strict all-white dress code.

At London 1908, when Wimbledon was also the tennis venue, Great Britain won all six gold medals. Indoor tennis featured for the first time as well as the five outdoor events – men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles. For the first time since Paris 1924 mixed doubles will be contested at London 2012.

Between the 1896 and 1924, Great Britain dominated Olympic tennis, winning 39 medals including 15 golds.

Brothers Laurence and Reginald Doherty were in fine form at Paris 1900 with Laurence winning the men's singles, the pair winning the men's doubles and Reginald partnering Charlotte Cooper to mixed doubles victory.

Kathleen 'Kitty' Godfree (née McKane) won five Olympic medals between 1920 and 1924 – singles bronze at Antwerp 1920 and Paris 1924; a mixed doubles silver and women's doubles gold in Belgium; and women's doubles silver in Paris.

Great Britain have only won one Olympic medal since 1924 however – Tim Henman and Neil Broad claimed men's doubles silver at Atlanta 1996.

Team GB 2012

British No.1 Andy Murray leads an eight-strong team at London 2012 at Wimbledon, just a few weeks after becoming the first Brit to reach a men's singles final at the Championships, Wimbledon for 74 years.

Murray has now reached at least the semi-finals in his last four appearances at Wimbledon and he will make a second Olympic appearance in both the singles and the men's doubles, alongside brother Jamie.

Also entering the men's doubles will be Ross Hutchins and Colin Fleming, who together reached the quarter-finals of last year's US Open and Wimbledon.

In the women's section, Fed Cup teammates Anne Keothavong and Elena Baltacha will both make their Olympic debuts in singles and will join forces for the doubles. Heather Watson and Laura Robson will also play in the doubles.

Back in 2008 Laura Robson won the Wimbledon girls' title, while Watson, who reached the third round of the ladies' competition this year – becoming the first Brit to do so for a decade – won the 2009 Junior US Open.

Competition format

In this group of athletes we have a real mix of talent, from athletes who have been playing professionally for years to those players really just at the beginning of their fledgling careers, but one thing's for sure, and that is the fact we'll be ready to give it our absolute all.

Triathlon

Introduction

Triathlon is comprised of three disciplines – swim, bike and run, completed in that order with no breaks in between – and made its first appearance on the Olympic schedule at Sydney 2000.

The first ever triathlon was held at Mission Bay, San Diego, California in 1974 but since Sydney 2000, the sport has rapidly grown in popularity across the world.

At London 2012, the men's and women's race will be held in Hyde Park – although the cycling element will leave the grounds to pass under Wellington Arch and travel along Constitution Hill, bypassing Buckingham Palace before returning to the Park.

Michelle Dillon's sixth-place finish at Athens 2004 remains the best performance by a Brit in an Olympic triathlon to date while Simon Lessing and Tim Don ended ninth and tenth respectively at Sydney 2000.

At Beijing 2008, Alistair Brownlee was the best performing Brit, finishing 12th, while Will Clarke was 14th and Don was lapped on the bike section and eliminated. In the women's race Helen Jenkins ended 21st while Hollie Avil failed to finish.

All six Olympic triathlon gold medals have been won by different countries – Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Germany, Switzerland and Austria – but Australia top the overall medal table, having also won two silvers and a bronze.

as the reigning world champions after both won the 2011 ITU World Championship Series.

Both Alistair Brownlee and Jenkins also took victory in the London leg, in early August last year.

The pair are also the only two of the six selected for London to have travelled to China for the Beijing Games in 2008 with Jonathan Brownlee, Hayes, Hall and Holland all set to make their Olympic debuts. Hayes is coached by and married to fellow triathlete Michelle Dillon after tying the knot in January.

Alistair Brownlee's younger brother Jonathan finished as the runner-up to him in the ITU World Championship Series in 2011 and has won the respective legs in San Diego and Madrid already this year. Alistair won the Kitzbühel leg in June upon his return from an Achilles injury.

All three British men have tasted ITU World Championship Series success with Hayes winning the Kitzbühel round in 2010 while Jenkins became the first British woman to take the title since it switched away from a one-event format – adding to her 2008 title.

Holland meanwhile, has World Championship finishes of fifth and seventh in San Diego and Madrid respectively this year and Hall has already made a name for herself as one of the fastest swimmers in triathlon.

Competition format

The men's and the women's races each see a 55-strong field take part with each country limited to three male and three female entrants.

Both the men and the women will complete a 1500m swim in Hyde Park's Serpentine before a 43km cycle, broken down into seven laps of a 6.137km course, and finishing with a 10km run, entailing four laps of a 2.5km course.

The race is completed from start to finish, with no breaks. The transitions between the swim, the bike and the run are part of the race – crucial seconds can be gained or lost in the transition area.

There are no heats; both the men's and women's events consist of a single race. The first athlete to cross the finish line is the winner.

Around the course athletes can incur time penalties for various infringements. This can happen, for instance, for blocking or impeding another athlete; not completing the transition properly – for example keeping the bike helmet on to complete the run – or cycling in the transition zone.

Time penalties are served either in the transition area, or in a penalty box during the run.

Volleyball

Volleyball

Introduction

It would be interesting to know what William G. Morgan, who devised volleyball in the late 19th century, would make of the sport at the Olympics today. Originally envisioned as a gentle alternative to basketball, Morgan would not recognise one of the most high-octane sports at the Games.

Split into indoor and beach – indoor volleyball made its debut at Tokyo 1964, having been a demonstration sport in 1924, and beach volleyball first appeared 72 years later in Atlanta. There have been men's and women's competitions in both disciplines every time volleyball has appeared on the Olympic schedule.

Indoor volleyball is played between two teams of six players on a court measuring 18 metres long by nine metres wide while beach volleyball is a variation of the game played on a sand court measuring 16 metres by eight metres with only two players per team. Beach volleyball became a FIVB-endorsed variation in 1987.

The former Soviet Union is the most successful indoor volleyball team in Olympic history with seven golds – three for men and four for women.

The men's competition has proved wide open in recent editions, with four different winners at the last four Games – USA in 2008, Brazil in 2004, Yugoslavia in 2000 and the Netherlands in 1996.

Cuba have been a dominant force in the women's game, winning three straight golds between 1992 and 2000, but Russia will arrive in London as defending world champions and Brazil as the Olympic champions.

At Beijing 2008 all the men's and women's beach volleyball medals were shared between pairs from the USA, Brazil and China, with the USA winning both golds.

The indoor volleyball competition at London 2012 will be staged at Earls Court, which also hosted the boxing, gymnastics, weightlifting and wrestling competitions at the London 1948 Games.

Beach volleyball will be hosted in a temporary 15,000 capacity arena built on Horse Guards Parade, the venue for the Queen's annual official birthday celebration, Trooping the Colour.

Team GB 2012

Team GB took up the opportunity to use host nation places in both indoor and beach volleyball and will therefore field four different teams at London 2012.

Britain will field a 12-strong men's and a 12-strong women's team in the indoor competition, while Zara Dampney and Shauna Mullin and Steve Grotowski and John Garcia-Thompson are the women's and men's pairs chosen for beach volleyball.

Britain have never fielded an indoor volleyball team at the Olympics with Ben Pipes and Lynne Beattie set to make history by captaining the men's and women's teams respectively at London 2012.

Jason Haldane is the oldest member of the indoor team, across both men and women, turning 41 four days before the opening

The women's team will face world champions Russia and world bronze medallists Japan in their group as well as Algeria, Italy and the Dominican Republic.

Meanwhile Dampney and Mullin's selection marks the first time that Britain will compete in beach volleyball at an Olympics since Atlanta 1996. Audrey Cooper and Amanda Glover were Britain's representatives as the sport made its Olympic debut in the USA and finished ninth.

Dampney and Mullin faced a battle for Olympic selection against Denise Johns and Lucy Boulton. Cooper, who like Mullin is Scottish, is now the head coach of the women's indoor team.

Dampney and Mullin will be joined on the British team by John Garcia-Thompson and Steve Grotowski. Garcia-Thompson and Grotowski will be Britain's first-ever male beach volleyball representatives at an Olympics.

Competition format

Both a men's and women's indoor volleyball squad at the Olympics consists of 12 athletes with 12 different nations per gender set to compete.

Each team in indoor volleyball is separated by a high net that is set at 2.43 metres for men and 2.24 metres for women.

After an initial serve, each team has a maximum of three hits to return the ball across the net; consecutive touches by the same player are not permitted and blocks do not count as a hit. The team that wins the point serves next and it is possible to win points on and against the serve.

Matches are best of five sets and the first four sets go to 25 points. If required, the final set will go to 15 points. All sets must be won by at least two clear points.

Nations are split into two groups of six with each team playing every other in their group. The top four from each group progress to the quarter-finals before semi-finals to produce gold-medal and bronze-medal matches.

While there are 288 athletes – 144 men and 144 women – selected for indoor volleyball, beach volleyball will feature 24 men's pairs and 24 women's pairs, with 24 different nations in each gender competing.

The rules are similar to its indoor variant with both teams allowed three touches to return the ball, without consecutive touches. Matches are played in a best of

Weightlifting

Team GB's Natasha Perdue will compete in the women's 69kg event

Introduction

The ultimate test of strength and power, weightlifting was part of the schedule at the original modern Olympics in 1896.

It was then dropped in 1900 and returned in 1904 before being removed again, only to be reinstated in 1920 and it has remained ever since. Women's weightlifting made its debut at the Sydney 2000 Olympics.

Weightlifting is hugely popular in Iran, where it is viewed as the national sport, while China won eight of the 15 golds at the 2008 Olympics in Beijing and again topped the medal table at last year's World Championships with six golds.

Speed, explosive power, perfect technique and raw strength are the key attributes needed to be successful but good nicknames can help as well.

Super heavyweight Hossein Reza zadeh was known as 'The Iranian Hercules' and won Olympic gold in 2000 and 2004.

India's first female Olympic medallist Karnam Malleswari was dubbed 'the iron girl of Andhra Pradesh' and Naim Süleymanoğlu, arguably the greatest lifter of all-time, was nicknamed 'the Pocket Hercules'.

Team GB's Zoe Smith has the nickname

It's not uncommon for lifters to haul several times their bodyweight above their heads, Reza zadeh's 263kg – or 41st 6lbs – clean and jerk attempt at Athens 2004 remains the biggest weight ever lifted.

London's ExCeL will be the venue for the Olympic weightlifting competitions.

Team GB 2012

Five Brits – three men and two women – will all make their Olympic debuts when competing in the weightlifting competition at London 2012.

Zoe Smith will participate in the women's 58kg category, Natasha Perdue in the 69kg while fellow Welsh weightlifter Gareth Evans will tackle the men's 69kg.

Peter Kirkbride, the only Scot on the team, and Jack Oliver complete the British quintet and will compete in the 94kg and 77kg events respectively.

It is the largest British weightlifting team at an Olympic Games since Barcelona 1992 when a squad of six was taken.

At 18, Smith is the youngest member of the team but will go into the Games having won bronze at the Commonwealth Games in 2010 – her first senior international competition.

In claiming bronze Smith also became the first female English weightlifter to win a Commonwealth Games medal while she achieved the Olympic A standard in the I'm convinced we will participate in London with our strongest and best prepared team. Our young, strong-bodied and strong-minded athletes will show to millions around the world, and in their own country, exactly what it means to be a British weightlifter.

WORDS TO LEARN

NO LIFT:

A lift that is judged to be unsuccessful by at least two of the three referees

PRESS OUT:

An illegal move where the lifter bends the arms while holding the bar overhead, then presses them out to straighten them

SQUAT:

To drop while bending the legs, with the feet to either side

HOOK:

A grip technique where the last joint of the thumb is covered by the other fingers of the same hand

Smith isn't the only one of the five to have claimed a medal at the Commonwealth Games in 2010 however as Kirkbride won silver in the 94kg in Delhi.

Meanwhile, Perdue will follow in the footsteps of her father Terry, who competed at Mexico City 1968 and Munich 1972 in weightlifting, by becoming an Olympian.

Competition format

There are eight weight categories for men – 56kg, 62kg, 69kg, 77kg, 85kg, 94kg, 105kg, +105kg and seven for women – 48kg, 53kg, 58kg, 63kg, 69kg, 75kg and +75kg. Each event features two lifts; the snatch and the clean and jerk.

In the snatch the bar is lifted from the floor to above the head in one fluid movement. In the clean and jerk the bar is brought to the shoulders and then jerked above the head. Each athlete is allowed three attempts in the snatch and three in the clean and jerk. Their best lift in each is then combined to determine their overall result but if they fail to achieve a valid lift in any of their three snatch attempts they are eliminated.

Enter the competition too early and a lifter will waste one of their attempts on a weight they can easily manage, but enter too late and they risk not recording a score.

If a tie occurs the athlete with the lower bodyweight will take precedence. In the event two athletes weigh the same, the winner is the lifter who achieved the total weight first.

Each country is limited to ten athletes – six men and four women – across all events, with a maximum of two athletes in any event.

TEAM GB HERO: LAUNCESTON ELLIOT

Launceston Elliot became Great Britain's first ever Olympic champion when he won the one-handed lift at Athens 1896 – the first Games of the modern era.

Elliot was a busy man in Greece and as well as attracting the attention of female admirers he also won silver in the two-handed lift.

He so nearly won gold, lifting the same weight as Denmark's Viggo Jensen, but, because he moved one of his feet during the lift, he lost out for having an inferior style.

Elliot also took part in track and field, the 100m specifically, rope-climbing, which was classed as a gymnastics event, and Greco-Roman wrestling in Athens.

Wrestling

Introduction

Olympic wrestling is split into two disciplines – Greco-Roman and freestyle – and is one of five combat sports on the London 2012 schedule.

Recognised as one of the world's oldest sports, wrestling was first held at the ancient Olympics in 708 BC, and Greco-Roman wrestling was included at the Athens 1896 Games, the first of the modern era.

Played out on an octagonal mat, the sport, is a battle of nerves, strength and skill, and is one of seven Olympic sports to be held at the ExCeL during London 2012. Eight years after Greco-Roman wrestling featured at Athens 1896, freestyle was introduced at St Louis 1904 – there were no wrestling events at Paris 1900. Women's wrestling joined the Olympic programme at Athens 2004.

The Greco-Roman form limits athletes to the use of their arms and upper bodies only while freestyle enables athletes to grapple below the waist.

There are 18 medal events at London 2012. Only men compete in Greco-Roman wrestling, of which there are seven categories, while there are seven male freestyle categories and four female.

The Soviet Union top the overall historical medal table while Russia were dominant at Beijing 2008. Great Britain have won 17 medals since Athens 1896 – three golds, four silvers and ten bronze – all coming in the freestyle events.

The last British Olympic wrestling medal was Noel Loban's light heavyweight bronze at the Los Angeles 1984. Before that it was Ken Richmond at Helsinki 1952, who like Loban, won bronze.

Samuel Rabin in 1928, Andrew McDonald in 1924, and Philip Bernard and Peter Wright in 1920 also won bronze medals.

Team GB 2012

Great Britain will field its smallest team at London 2012 in the sport of wrestling with just one participant selected, using a host nation spot.

Olga Butkevych takes up the sole place and will wrestle in the freestyle 55kg category. She won silver in the discipline at the Olympic test event last year.

Butkevych is also a 2010 European bronze medallist in the non-Olympic 59kg weight category – her first major international medal for Great Britain.

Competition format

There will be 344 athletes competing in the wrestling categories at London 2012 with each nation limited to one athlete per event.

mat measuring 12m by 12m. Inside the mat is a 9m diameter combat circle.

Bouts can last for a maximum of three two-minute periods, with a 30-second break in between each one. Periods are decided by points, awarded for various throws and holds.

A period is won by technical superiority by performing a grand amplitude hold, worth five points, scoring two holds worth three points or gaining a six-point lead.

The athlete who wins two periods wins the bout. A contest can finish early if a wrestler pins their opponent by forcing the back of their opponent's shoulders to the ground.

In freestyle wrestling, the third, deciding period may last longer than two minutes to determine the winner. In the event of a tie on points in the third period after two minutes, the bout enters a golden score period, when the first score wins.

The rules in women's freestyle wrestling are similar to those used in men's but with some key variations – for example double headlocks are forbidden.

For all events, there is a direct elimination system that eventually decides the two finalists for the gold-medal match.

All wrestlers who lose against either finalist, at any stage of the competition up to and including the semi-finals, enter the repechage; the winners of the two repechage groups win bronze medals.

AMBITION PROGRAMME

OLD TRAFFORD
WIMBLEDON

British Olympic Association Ambition Programme

While Team GB are striving for gold at the London 2012 Olympics, the foundations are also being laid for success at future Games through the BOA's Olympic Ambition Programme.

In total 130 athletes and 56 coaches – from across 44 sport disciplines – will take part in the Programme during the Games, which is supported by Proud Partner of London 2012, Lloyds TSB.

The Programme will give the next crop of potential Olympians and coaches – both for the Sochi Winter Games in 2014 and the next Summer Olympics in Rio in 2016 – a unique opportunity to experience the Olympic Games environment firsthand this summer.

Among the Programme for 2012 is a two-time Winter X Games snowboarding gold medallist Jenny Jones, world junior champion fencer Philip Marsh and, on the coaching side of things, 2002 Winter Olympic women's curling gold medallist Rhona Martin.

The Programme was first delivered by the BOA at the Beijing 2008 Games and alumni including World Championship silver medallists Hannah England – 1500m athletics – and Imogen Bankier and Chris Adcock – badminton mixed doubles – will be aiming for success in London.

Modern pentathlon world champion Mhairi Spence, ITU World Championship Series runner-up triathlete Jonathan Brownlee and European 400m hurdles bronze medallist Perri Shakes-Drayton have also experienced the Ambition Programme and been selected for London 2012. In total there are 42 graduates from the Programme competing this summer.

British Athletes Commission Chair and Ambition Programme Director Sarah Winckless said: "The Ambition Programme is world leading in terms of preparation for competing at future Olympic Games and I will be encouraging the young British athletes and coaches to grab hold of this special opportunity with both hands and take in as much from the experience as they possibly can.

"The Programme will give the athletes and coaches an insight into the different unique aspects of the Olympic environment and help them develop the tools they will need to become successful Olympians of the future, both as athletes, and as well-rounded young people."

The Programme aims to provide personal development and inspiration to the participants and be part of the performance legacy for Team GB from the London 2012 Olympic Games.

During the Programme all athletes and coaches visited Team GB's Preparation Camp at Loughborough University, where they took part in kitting out and experienced a multi-sport preparation environment.

The participants also have a trip to London and a look around the Athletes' Village in the Olympic Park on their itinerary, as well as having the chance to watch two Olympic competition sessions and experience the atmosphere at Team GB House at Westfield Stratford City.

Team GB Chef de Mission and British Olympic Association CEO Andy Hunt said: "The Olympic Ambition Programme is a key element of our legacy planning for future Olympic Games, both summer and winter.

"The young athletes and coaches participating in the Programme will experience the unique atmosphere and environment of the Olympic Games and gain a very special behind the scenes insight with Team GB."
