Outbreak of new coronavirus infection in our museum and our response

We have confirmed that a staff member working at the museum has been infected with the new coronavirus.

The staff wore masks while working, and took their temperatures and disinfected their hands before work.

We have already disinfected the facility.

The museum will continue to give top priority to preventing the spread of the new coronavirus infection and ensuring the safety of its guests and staff, and will work with all related parties to thoroughly implement measures to curb infectious diseases.
