The Multinational Copyright License — for all the ways you work

The license allows users to lawfully reuse content across borders in several ways:

Email a PDF of a journal article to a colleague in conjunction with a collaborative project you are working on together

Host a competitive intelligence collaboration site for project teams that includes news articles, published literature, press releases market reports, and other content related to direct competitors

Embed a PDF of a recent newspaper article about the organization into an internal company newsletter or post it to the company's intranet for employee awareness

Use portions of a work in an internal presentation at a company meeting or employee education program

Store a copy of a purchased article on the company intranet for use by a project team

Store the full text of an article to substantial claims made in promotional materials in the same system that was used to develop, manage, and approve the content

Scan printed works into digital form when an electronic version of the work is not readily available

Annotate and store copies of scientific articles related to known adverse events of a company product in an internal database which is used by a small team in connection with the company's regulatory compliance obligations

Annotate and submit supporting articles to a government agency as required as part of a regulatory or patent filing

Share a PDF version of a recent newspaper article about the company in a briefing to the company's Board of Directors

Provide an article to a client who requests more information about a product or service on an unsolicited basis

Note: The Multinational Copyright License is generally intended to permit the reuse of articles on a periodic, non-systematic basis with other people within an organization. It is not meant to replace subscriptions that you or other people in the organization need in the ordinary context of your work. The license does not cover the external display of copies on mobile devices as part of the user's systematic sales or marketing activities.
