one medical

Protecting Yourself Against Recruiting Scams

Please be aware that there are people impersonating One Medical employees and creating fake job listings to steal personal information and/or money from candidates. We want to make sure that all interested applicants stay safe when applying for jobs at One Medical. Here are tips to keep you and your personal information safe:

- All One Medical job openings that appear on job boards (i.e. Glassdoor or Indeed) are also listed on careers.onemedical.com. If you see a One Medical position posted on a job board, but not on our website, it is not a legitimate position.
- One Medical employees use emails with the domain @onemedical.com. If you receive an email from someone claiming to be a One Medical employee, please ensure they are using that domain.
- To be offered a position at One Medical, our candidates go through multiple rounds of interviews. If you are offered a position without going through a rigorous process, please know that the job offer is illegitimate.
- One Medical will never request passport details, financial information (i.e. credit card, bank account, etc.) or money from job candidates. If this information is requested from you before a thorough interview process, it is a scam.
- If you have gone through an interview process and received an offer, and you are uncertain that it was legitimate, please email recruiting@onemedical.com to verify whether it was legitimate before providing any personal information for onboarding purposes.

If you believe that you have been a victim of a fraudulent recruiting scam, please contact the Internet Crimes Complaint Center at www.IC3.gov. The IC3 is an FBI entity that gathers and analyzes internet fraud in order to prosecute scammers.